Coincidence, or a repeat of 1976?

Nation's economy may be running into trouble

WASHINGTON (AP) — Is the nation's economy headed for another major slowdown in the second half of 1977, similar to what happened last year? Budget Director Bert Lance doesn't think so, but he admits there are similarities.

"It is a coincidence. No doubt about it," Lance said in an interview Friday.

Among the coincidences:

—Unemployment rose suddenly in June of both years after months of decline. The jobless rate was 7.1 per cent in June of this year, up from 6.9 per cent in May. In June 1976, it rose to 7.6 per cent, from May's 7.3 per cent.

—The economy grew much more rapidly in the first half of 1977 than was expected. The same thing happened in 1976. Lance said economic growth in the second quarter probably will at least equal the 6.9 per cent growth of the first three months.

—Retail sales slowed in the second quarter of this year, just as they did in 1976.

—The federal government is underspending its budget by as much as $10 billion so far this year. Government underspending of about the same amount last year was blamed by many economists as a major cause of the sharp slowdown in economic activity after mid-year.

—And finally, the government's index of leading economic indicators, which is designed to foreshadow future economic trends, declined two-tenths of one per cent in May, the first decline in several months. In 1976, it declined the same amount in April, also for the first time in several months.

The Carter administration has expected all along that growth in the second half of 1977 will not match the first half growth. But it nevertheless is counting on healthy growth that will reduce unemployment to about 6.5 per cent by the end of the year.

Lance indicated he does not rule out the possibility of a sharper slowdown than the administration has predicted, but added, "I don't think there will be a pause in the same way we had last year." He said business should be good throughout the year.

But he also said he wouldn't exclude the need to take measures to stimulate the economy if a sharp slowdown does occur. "We will have to be flexible about it; we will have to deal with that if and when it takes place," he added.

Lance said the economy now shows signs of strength it didn't have in 1976, including the strong performance in the first three months of the year when common anticipation was that the severe winter could throw the economy into a tailspin.

He also said consumers and businessmen are not faced by the same kinds of political uncertainty about the future since this is not an election year.

While the government underspending continues, Lance said he doesn't think it's all bad, and he said he expects it to go on for a while longer. He said he doesn't share the view of some economists that the shortfall in spending contributed to the economic slowdown last year.

13 dead, 16 missing in Europe flash flood

PARIS (AP) — Flash floods triggered by heavy rain during the past two days swept through southwest France and western Switzerland, leaving at least 13 persons dead and 16 missing, authorities said Saturday.

Property damage was described as heavy and rain continued to fall in some areas. The worst-hit area was France's Gers department between Toulouse and the Atlantic Coast, where officials declared an emergency.

Officials said the rainfall in some areas was the heaviest in 42 years and hail associated with the rain storm caused extensive damage to crops.

Army helicopters and light boats were rushed to southwest France to help civilian rescuers. Premier Raymond Barre ordered $200,000 be made available for emergency relief.

In the French town of Auch nearly 400 miles south of Paris, the Pont-Saint-Pierre bridge collapsed and a car and at least two occupants plunged into the river. Houses on the outskirts of town were inundated so that only their rooftops were visible. Residents gathered on roofs and some were lifted to safety by helicopters.

Four bodies were recovered in the Auch area Saturday and another was located in the countryside, where flood water was subsiding. A fireman disappeared while trying to reach children clinging to some trees. The children were later rescued.

The bodies of two persons from a camp site hit by a flash flood Friday at Isle-en-Dodon 30 miles southwest of Toulouse. Authorities said at least 12 others were missing. The Save River at Isle-en-Dodon was back inside its normal banks Saturday, but some roads were still cut by flood pools 3 feet deep.

In the Lot-et-Garonne department, the body of a nurse was found near her car which was submerged by floodwater near the Cambo River Friday. Her husband, believed to have been with her, has not been found. Three other persons were missing in the same area.

In the Valais region of southwest Switzerland, lightning struck and killed a 25-year-old man. Three other Swiss were killed Thursday the car in which they were riding plunged into a rampaging river in Bernese Oberland, an Alpine tourist resort.

FLOOD AFTERMATH

Residents on far bank of Gers River view the remains of a bridge in Pont-Sait-Pierre near Auch in southwestern France Saturday after heavy rains caused flash flooding. A car containing two persons plunged into the river when the bridge collapsed. The flood, which also hit parts of Switzerland, left 13 dead and 16 missing.

Suspects in serious condition

A cab driver shot and seriously wounded three men who allegedly tried to rob him early Saturday morning in Cucamonga, sheriff's deputies said.

Those wounded were Joe Anguiano, Jr., 19, Marco Moralez, 19 and Joe Nunez, 18, all of Cucamonga. Nunez was reported in critical condition with a bullet wound in the stomach at San Bernardino County Hospital.

Anguiano was in serious condition and Moralez in stable condition, both at the county hospital in San Bernardino. Deputies said the latter two were shot in the face.

Deputy David Rivera gave this account of the shooting which occurred at 2:30 a.m. in the 8700 block of London Street:

The cab driver, whose name was not released, had dropped off passenger at the London Street location. He was then approached by five male Latins who pointed a rifle at him and demanded that he stop the cab.

The cabbie, however, drew a 9mm handgun which he reportedly carried for protection, and exchanged shots with the suspects.

One of the robbers fired a shot at the driver, missing him. The driver then fired eight shots in return, wounding all three men. During the exchange, the man carrying the rifle managed to get off two more shots but none of them hit the cabbie.

Rivera said the cab driver, from Yellow Cab Co. of Pomona, fled the scene of the shooting and notified his dispatcher, who contacted sheriff's deputies.

Schieb pleads innocent to weapons charges

A Washington man, indicted by the Los Angeles County Grand Jury in connection with huge stockpiles of weapons and explosives found last December in Ontario, Pomona and Antelope Valley, has pleaded innocent to charges of possessing illegal munitions.

Phillip Earl Schieb Jr., 42, the son of a well-known auto-painting chain owner in Southern California, entered his not-guilty plea in Los Angeles Superior Court Friday.

Scheib has been charged with seven felony counts of possession of illegal munitions, including machine guns, hand grenades, explosives and a missle launcher.

The weapons are part of the same materials found last December at a Pomona metal foundry, an Ontario residence and property in the Mojave Desert.

Donald G. Wiggins, 41, of Ontario, recently entered guilty pleas in both Los Angeles and San Bernardino County Superior courts on similar charges.

According to Dep. Dist. Atty. Robert Jorgenson, the weapons alleged to have been possessed by Scheib are part of the nearly 10 tons of explosives and guns found by police investigators during a two-week period last December.

While declining to comment on reported connections between Wiggins and Scheib, Jorgensen was quoted as saying, "There's obviously a relationship in that he (Scheib) has been charged with the same materials."

Scheib, a former Southern California resident, was arrested in Clarkston, Wash., June 28, one day after the Los Angeles County Grand Jury returned a secret indictment against him.

Wiggins is still awaiting sentencing, but has reportedly cooperated with authorities in the continuing investigation of the matter.

Wiggins was one of seven witnesses to testify before the Grand Jury in the Scheib case. He has agreed to testify against Scheib in court, sources say.

Scheib has been described as a well-to-do, self-employed businessman involved in real estate in California and Washington, where he has lived for two years.

He has been linked frequently to paramilitary organizations and his arrest climaxed a six-month investigation into the tons of seized weapons and explosives found by weapons experts, authorities revealed.

3 brothers shot from passing van

Three Montclair brothers were gunned down Saturday morning from a passing van in two separate but apparently related shooting incidents, police said.

Wounded were David, Danny and Alfred Ramirez, all of 9178 Camulos St. Montclair. Danny and David, both 17, were treated and released at Montclair Doctors Hospital. Alfred, 21, was listed in stable condition Saturday evening at the hospital.

Police said that two of the brothers, David and Alfred were shot while standing in the driveway of their home at about 6 a.m. Saturday. Only minutes later police received reports that Danny had been shot and wounded while walking near the west athletic field of Montclair High School.

Police said that witnesses in both incidents described the suspect vehicle as a white Chevrolet van with mag-type wheels and a porthole. Several male Latins were reported to be riding in the van, police said.

The weapon used in the shootings is believed to be a .22 caliber rifle. No arrests have been made and police are continuing their investigation.

Carter denies power balance is shifting

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Carter administration study rejects as "largely unfounded" the assumption by some Ford administration officials that the global power balance is shifting in favor of the Soviet Union, sources say.

The finding is contained in an exhaustive five-month interagency study which will be reviewed by President Carter in the coming weeks. It was discussed at a Cabinet-level meeting Thursday chaired by Zbigniew Brzezinski, Carter's national security adviser.

The study holds that the two superpowers are "roughly even" in strategic capability and that the United States should be able to keep pace with the Soviet Union, assuming present U.S. weapons systems are continued, according to the sources.

Among the reasons for the optimistic forecasts, the sources said, are the basic strength of the American economy and a perceived inability ofthe Soviet Union to compete with the United States in the area of technological innovation.

A few days before leaving office last January, former Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld said the power balance trends of the last 10 to 15 years have been "decidedly adverse" to the United States.

Rumsfeld said expanded Soviet nuclear and conventional force strength has increased Soviet options. He suggested that continuation of these trends could tempt the Soviets to challenge the United States in an area of American national interest.

Intelligence reports made public at that time said that though the Soviet military budget had grown by a third between 1965 and 1975, U.S. arms spending had dropped by a similar amount from the 1968 wartime high.

Trade for three officials, promise of safe conduct

Palestininan hijackers free 28 hostages

KUWAIT (AP) — Palestinian hijackers of a Kuwait Airlines jet freed 28 hostages Saturday in exchange for three officials who boarded the plane to guarantee a promise of safe conduct to Aden, capital of South Yemen, a Kuwait government spokesman said.

The Kuwaiti Information Ministry said South Yemen has agreed to allow the nine hijackers into Aden, the capital, about 1,200 miles south of here. A spokesman said the plane would leave Kuwait early Sunday.

The spokesman said the three officials who boarded the jet would fly with the nine hijackers to South Yemen. He said the hijackers agreed to release the volunteers when they arrived in Aden.

He identified the three as South Yemen Ambassador to Kuwait Mohammed Abdu, Kuwaiti internal security chief Momammed al-Hamad, and Awni Battash, deputy chief of the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) mission in Kuwait.

The South Yemen ambassador, who negotiated with the hijackers, said their demands were connected to internal rivalries in the Palestinian guerrilla movement.

The hijackers originally demanded that 300 prisoners held in Arab jails be freed in exchange for the lives of their captives.

A Palestinian official in Kuwait said the hijackers' were told their demands was unreasonable and were simply "left up in the air."

The Kuwait Airlines Boeing 707 was seized Friday night while on a flight from Beirut, Lebanon to Kuwait. It left Beirut with 45 passengers, including the hijackers, and a crew of 10.

Eighteen hostages were freed earlier Saturday, leaving 28 persons aboard including the British pilot and co-pilot. They were released unharmed after the agreement was reached. Among the final hostages freed was Kuwait's ambassador to Lebanon, Abdul Hamid al-Buaijan.

A spokesman for British Midland Airways, which leased the plane to Kuwait Airways and provided the crew, said a second flight crew was standing by to fly the plane to Aden.

The Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) issued a statement here disclaiming any connection with the hijack. The PLO identified the gang s leader as Abu Saed, 36, an accused thief, defrauder and extortionist who escaped Thursday from a guerrilla prison in Beirut.

Book says American POWs killed in Hiroshima A-boming

LONDON (AP) — A new book by two British writers says American prisoners of war, some captured less than two weeks earlier, were among 80,000 persons killed in the U.S. atomic bombing of Hiroshima in World War II and that two who survived were reported beaten to death.

"For 32 years this information has been suppressed," claimed Gordon Thomas, co-author of the book "Enola Gay," in an interview here.

The Pentagon in Washington said 10 to 20 U.S. prisoners were believed to be in Hiroshima at the time but it added it could not be adequately determined if any were victims of the bombing.

In the book, named after the B-29 bomber that carried out the world's first atomic attack on Aug. 6, 1945, Thomas and coauthor Max Morgan Witts write that an estimated 23 Americans were being held in Hiroshima at the time. The authors said 10 of them had been taken prisoner in Okinawa and the rest had been shot down over Hiroshima on July 28, 1945.

"The fate of the American prisoners of war is not certain," they add in their 327-page book. "Two were reported to have been escorted, wounded but able to walk, to Ujina. One was seen under a bridge, apparently dying, wearing only a pair of red and white underpants. Two were said to have been battered to death in the castle grounds by their captors." Ujina is in the port section of Hiroshima.

Witts, also interviewed with Thomas, said: "We cannot say for certain what happened to every single person because the official records themselves are neither accurate — they're often contradictory — nor are they comprehensive."

But the authors named six U.S. Army Air Force personnel who they said were killed in the Hiroshima attack.

Thomas and Witts, who have coauthored five previous books, including "Voyage of the Damned" and "Guernica," expressed the belief that guilt feelings were attached to the attack and because of this the American deaths were not disclosed. The United States also dropped an atomic bomb on the Japanese city of Nagasaki on Aug. 9, 1945, inflicting an estimated 75,000 casualties and destroying a third of the city.

"There's no doubt in our minds," said Thomas of the Hiroshima attack, "that the relatives, the wives, mothers, sweethearts of these dead men, believe their menfolk were killed by enemy action." One man, Staff Sgt. Julius Molnar of Kalamazoo, Mich, a rear turret gunner on a bomber named Taloa, one of the two B24s shot down on July 28, was reported killed in action and posthumously awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross, they said.

None of the 10 men captured on Okinawa, presumably U.S. Marines, were named by the authors. But in the interview, they listed five other men in addition to Molnar as having died in Hiroshima on Aug. 6.

They identified them as 2nd Lt. James M. Ryan, bombardier; Sgt. Hugh Atkinson, radio operator; Sgt. Buford Ellison, flight engineer; Cpl. John Long, nose gunner, and 2nd Lt. Durden Looper, co-pilot. All were from the crew of the B24 Lonesome Lady, shot down over Hiroshima.

"Those killed by the Japanese died the next day," said Witts. "August 6th was such a shambles."

The Pentagon in Washington, asked about the authors' claims, said: "There were between 10 and 20 American POWs in the Horoshima area at the time of the bombing. To the extent there were casualties cannot be adequately documented."

The Pentagon added that a message sent Sept. 23, 1945, to the commander of the U.S Pacific air command said that a Staff Sgt. Needles, not named by the authors, was captured before the atomic attack and died as a result of wounds received during the bombing. It said two or three other crewmen on Needles' plane also were captured.

"Another message reports that a number of men were missing in action just before the bombing," the Pentagon said, adding that they included all the men mentioned by Witts and Thomas in the interview. "Unfortunately we are unable to verify if any of the MIAs (missing in action) perished in the blast," the Pentagon said.

The authors said Hiroshima was a heavily armed city that had become — although the Americans probably did not know it at the time — the "linchpin in the defense of the whole of the eastern half of Japan."

"It was not a Dresden," said Thomas, referrring to the German city destroyed by the Allied during World War II in what some now believe was a senseless attack against a nonmilitary target. "It was a legitimate military target filled with troops quite determined to fight to the last man."

In Hiroshima at the time of the bombing were 40,000 Japanese soldiers and 90 per cent of them died, the author said.

Thomas and Witts refused to discuss their own personal feelings about the bombing and whether they believe it was necessary. But they said some Japanese they talked to before writing the book expressed the view that when the Soviet Union, with its millions of troops, entered the war in the Pacific, Japan knew it had lost and that the two atomic blasts gave them a way to get out of it.

Massachusetts claims health hazard

McDonald's suspends glass promotion, may file suit

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — The McDonald's hamburger chain suspended promotion and distribution Saturday of its "glasses to go" program following tests by the Massachusetts Health Department that found exterior decals on the glasses may pose a health hazard.

But McDonald's challenged the accuracy of the tests and threatened to sue Massachusetts.

"The ... Department of Health acted in an irresponsible and discriminatory manner," said a statement released by McDonald's Corp. and OwensIllinois Inc., which makes the glasses for McDonald's.

Massachusetts tests reportedly showed lead content up to 18 times the state tolerance in the decals. And the Food and Drug Administration said it was testing the glasses for lead content and that initial results may be available by today.

John T. Walden, assistant FDA commissioner for public affairs, said: "We are in no way indicating a health hazard at this time. But if people are concerned, the prudent thing to do is to stop using the glasses until our tests are completed."

"We continue to be completely convinced of the product's integrity," said Edward H. Schmitt, McDonald's president. "However, until our customers can be reassured that there were absolutely no grounds whatsoever for the action taken by Massachusetts Health Department officials, we are holding up our promotion and distributing."

Lead paint is especially dangerous when ingested by children under the age of 6. Doctors say they can suffer fatal brain damage from the lead over a period of time.

Douglas Timberlake, a spokesman for McDonald's, said there is no evidence of lead content violations. He said the company is temporarily discontinuing the free glass promotion in Massachusetts, but similar decisions elsewhere are up to regional officials. McDonald's sells the glasses filled with a soft drink.

Boys arrested for house fire in Montclair

Three teenage boys playing with pop bottle rockets were arrested in Montclair Friday afternoon after one of the fireworks landed on a shake shingle roof of a duplex apartment at 10262 Rose St. igniting a fire.

Montclair firefighters said approximately $3,000 worth of damage was done to the roof and attic area of the easterly apartment.

The teenagers were arrested for violation of the city code prohibiting the use of fireworks in the city. They were released to their parents.

'Days, not weeks,' for oil to flow

PUMP STATION NO. 8, Alaska (AP) — The transAlaska pipeline will be put back in operation "in days, not weeks," after a deadly explosion that halted the flow of oil through the massive engineering project.

Edward L Patton, chief executive officer of the Alyeska Pipeline Service Co., said Saturday he couldn't give a precise time for start-up because several federal agencies will want to review the plan before it is implemented. But he said the delay will be measured in days.

Patton also said the explosion at Pump Station No. 8 is "probably going to come down to human error."

Meanwhile, state officials said the pipeline could resume operation in less than a week if engineers are able to bypass the station which was demolished in the blast.

In Washington, the Department of Transportation confirmed that the pipeline itself apparently was intact, despite Friday's blast which killed one workman and injured five.

It was the second major mishap forcing a pipeline shutdown in less than a week at Pump Station No. 8, about 41 miles southeast of Fairbanks at mile 488 on the 800-mile, $7.7 billion line.

Damage will exceed $5 million, a spokeswoman for Alyeska, the consortium of oil companies running the pipeline, said Saturday.

The explosion apparently was touched off when oil leaked through a malfunctioning check valve into the pumphouse and ignited. It reduced the building to a twisted, blackened maze of steel.

State Public Safety Commissioner Richard Burton said officials did not believe sabotage was involved.

The tremendous blast was heard six miles away. Burning oil flowed from the shattered building and destroyed thousands of dollars worth of pipeline construction equipment and a stand of birch trees. One pipeline worker outside of the pump house, said: "It was just like one of those atomic bombs going off. It just boiled and boiled up into the sky."

Happy making kids happy

Bike man with a kind heart

LAKE WALES, Fla. (AP) — At Elvin Johnson's house, the trash collectors make deliveries as well as pickups, dropping off any rusted old bicycles they find.

Parents in this central Florida community come by with bikes that have been outgrown. Dealers give Johnson a break on parts.

The 69-year-old disabled veteran spends his days in his backyard cleaning, painting, repairing and reassembling the bikes. Then he gives them to needy children.

"When I get through with them, they may not be new, but they run like new," says Johnson. "And when you make a kid happy, you're just as happy."

He started making kids happy with bicycles last Thanksgiving. The Ladies Auxiliary of the Veterans of Foreign Wars had prepared a food basket for a poor family, and Johnson thought about getting bicycles for the three children.

"I shopped around and got some old bikes and repaired them," he said. "Then I realized there were other children who could not afford to buy bikes, and I just couldn't quit."

Johnson, who had seven brothers and sisters, said he knows how difficult things can get for large families with little cash.

"I got my first bike by picking up the parts and making it myself," he said.

But a couple of times, he said, he found out that some of the children to whom he had given bicycles could have paid for them. Now he asks neighbors and others in the community for recommendations.

So far, he has sold six bikes — and given away 32.

WEEKEND ENERGY SESSION

Carter stresses need for new energy sources

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's governors told President Carter on Saturday that the federal government is placing too much emphasis on energy conservation and not enough on developing new energy resources.

"We got good advice," Carter said after the three-hour conference.

Carter also praised Congress for its work on his energy program which is still pending in the legislative halls where it has been given a less-than-friendly reception. He said that if Congress fails to approve his plan, he will keep fighting for it.

"If we don't get 100 per cent of a program this year, we'll be back next year," Carter told reporters in a brief statement in the White House press room.

The governors were invited to Washington by the administration to review the role the states can play in implementing energy policy. Forty four governors attended the two days of meetings.

Gov. Julian Carroll of Kentucky, chairman of the National Governors Conference committee on natural resources and environmental management, said after the Saturday meeting with Carter that "there seems to be a criticism generally that we concentrated more on conservation than on production."

But he said no commitment was extracted from Carter or the other federal officials on giving more emphasis on production.

James Schlesinger, Carter's chief energy adviser, said some governors also felt that "undue environmental restraints" were hindering energy development.

Schlesinger would not say what changes, if any, would be made in the administration's energy proposals as a result of the conference.

He said some discussion focused on gasoline rationing to deal with any major disruption of imported oil. He said Carter "had indicated we should have a rationing scheme that would curtail energy usage by 25 per cent, at least."

Carter said he sought the governors' counsel because many of the responsibilities for implementing policies set in Washington "fall to a major degree on the shoulders of government officials at local levels."

The President said that as a result of the meeting, a second session would be organized to discuss enhanced production of energy.

Carroll said the governors decided to set up groups to study incentives for conservation, emergency preparations, and the establishment of the proposed energy department.

Gov. Reubin Askew of Florida, chairman of the National Governors Conference, said the two days of meetings produced "a real dialogue between the federal government and the states.

Carroll said the governors left the meetings with the impression that Carter's energy proposals were "not as stringent, as restrictive, as harmful to them as they might have feared."

Administration officials denied that the governors were invited to Washington to counter the problems the Carter energy plan is having in Congress.

Gov. Edmund G. Brown of California, who the Carter political advisers see as the President's greatest threat to reelection in 1980, said the conference showed that Carter's energy plan was "still in fermentation."

No verdict in retrial of ex-Manson follower

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jurors deliberated three hours Saturday without reaching a verdict in the 10-week-old murder retrial of former Manson family member Leslie Van Houten.

The six-man, six-woman jury recessed until Monday.

During rebuttal arguments before the case went to the jury Friday, Deputy Dist. Atty. Stephen Kay told the panel that Miss Van Houten "knew exactly what she was doing" when she stabbed Rosemary LaBianca. He said Miss Van Houten wiped off fingerprints, hid in bushes outside the LaBianca home and burned the clothing she wore the night of the killings.

The defendant is charged with first-degree murder in the slayings of Leno and Rosemary LaBianca on Aug. 10, 1969 and with conspiracy in the deaths of Sharon Tate and four others the previous night. She, along with Manson and two other women, was convicted in 1971, but she alone was granted a retrial because her attorney died during the first trial.

She has admitted stabbing Mrs. LaBianca repeatedly after the woman was dead, but her defense has been that she acted as a robot under the influence of Manson and drugs.

"Bizarre beliefs alone are not enough," Kay told the jury Friday. "It is how they affect the capacity to commit first-degree murder. And in Miss Van Houten's case, it did not stop her from going through the requisite mental processes" to cover up her involvement.

"She's hopeful," Miss Van Houten's defense attorney, Maxwell Keith said. "She realizes it's an uphill battle because of the previous trial."

Kidnap-killer of Egyptian official jailed

CAIRO (AP) — Shukri Ahmed Mustafa, the bearded leader of a group of Moslem fanatics, was captured by police Friday and admitted masterminding the kidnap-slaying of a former Egyptian cabinet minister, the Interior Ministry announced.

Deputy Interior Minister Nabawy Ismail told reporters the arrest meant "police have moved from a stage of confrontation with the group to a stage of liquidation."

'We will not rest until all members of the group are in our hands. There are only a few left. We must put an end to this wave of terrorism," he declared.

More than 180 members of Mustafa's "Society of Atonement and Flight (from sin)" have been rounded up. President Anwar Sadat has ordered alleged conspirators to be tried by a military tribunal expected to start in about a week.

The arrest of Mustafa, 30, came a day after the funeral of the kidnap victim, 64-year-old Sheik Mohamed Zahabi, who was minister of religious affairs for 19 months until last November. He was kidnaped early last Sunday and killed the next day.

Indians ired by Goldwater remark

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Sen. Barry Goldwater has upset leaders of the Yavapai Apache Indians at Fort McDowell by characterizing members of the tribe as "very lazy people," according to a tribal spokesman.

The spokesman declined to elaborate, saying only that the Tribal Council had discussed the remark and that tribal chairman Hiawatha Hood was "very upset."

In a letter published in the July edition of the Audubon Society magazine, Goldwater criticized an article in an earlier edition which was uncomplimentary of the Central Arizona Project.

Last fall, members of the Fort McDowell tribe refused to sell their land for the proposed Orme Dam, part of a project designed to bring Colorado River water inland.

"They are nice people, very sweet people, but they are very lazy people and somebody has changed their minds," Goldwater wrote, adding that the Yavapai Apaches would have benefitted by increased land values had the dam been built.

Aides in the Arizona Republican's Washington office said the senator personally dictated the letter.

Told that Indian leaders were disturbed by the comment, Goldwater aide Jack Murphy said Friday, "I don't blame them. I would be, too, no matter how truthful it might be."

He said Goldwater was unavailable for comment.

Orme Dam proponents have all but given up on the project, partly because of the Fort McDowell opposition but also because of reports that bald eagles nesting in the area would be displaced.

"These are no American bald eagles, although they sure look like them," Goldwater wrote in his letter to the Audubon magazine.

But the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, responsible for protecting endangered species, said Friday the birds had definitely been identified as southern bald eagles and are on the protected list.

Motorcyclist killed trying to teach kids

Wayne Earl Davis was driving his motorcycle in a vacant field in the 18100 block of Gallineta Street, Rowland Heights, Friday night when he struck some bumpy areas in the field, losing control of the bike.

A 21-year-old Fontana man shot himself to death Friday evening after unsuccessfully trying to drive his car off a cliff in Hacienda Heights, sheriff's deputies said.

Fred A. Lamb was pronounced dead at the scene, according to Deputy Marvin Cavanaugh of the sheriff's information bureau.

Lamb began to drive his car off the cliff at Turnbull Canyon Road and Skyline Drive at 8:10 p.m., said Cavanaugh. The car became stuck on the cliff, however.

Cavanaugh said Lamb then stepped from the car and shot himself "between the eyes" with a 12-gauge shotgun. "It was rather bizarre," the deputy related.

Investigators were able to determine that the victim had been depressed for unknown reasons, Cavanaugh reported.

County pay package hit

'Cave in' angers Schabarum

Los Angeles County Supervisor Peter F. Schabarum is angry with the majority of his colleagues for "caving in to union demands to keep the peace" with county employes.

The supervisors reportedly reached agreement with 33 of the county's 41 bargaining units calling for an average pay raise of nearly 6 per cent and fringe benefits amounting to another half per cent.

That report has not been confirmed.

The first district supervisor, along with Baxter Ward, supervisor of the fifth district, found himself on the short end of a 3-2 vote this week.

Schabarum charged that the agreement was a "capitulation, showing that it is not the supervisors but the union who runs the county government."

He described the contract as a "sweetheart deal, a giveaway that will cost taxpayers at least $50 million more a year."

"Collective bargaining within the county system has become a farce," Schabarum declared. "The board has not done a good job in managing the taxpayers' money as far as the salary increases are concerned."

Schabarum said that even though the negotiations were supposed to be done in secret, the unions knew at all times what was happening because certain supervisors "leaked information to them.

"It's like a football game in which team A tells team B what its plays are going to be," he added.

He said that unless the public expresses its disapproval of the tentative agreement "real soon" the proposal will be ratified.

"I will in no way support those agreements," he said. "I was elected to run the county, not to have a bunch of self-serving labor leaders take that prerogative away."

If the salary raises are approved, they will go to about 75,000 county employes, more than 1,000 of whom live and work in the valley.

Children learning to fly in course

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Eddie Hodges taxis down the runway to wait for clearance from the control tower. His takeoff is smooth and not too steep.

Pretty good for a 12-year-old who claims to be afraid of heights.

In the back of the four-seat Cherokee Warrior airplane, navigator Vanessa Murdock pours over a map. She will get the next turn at piloting the plane. Vanessa is 9½.

Vanessa flies by instrument, "a pretty sophisticated technique," according to flight instructor Patrick Navarre. But then she has no choice. She is too small to see over the control panel.

Eddie, Vanessa and five other boys and girls fly each Saturday as part of an aviation class through Emerson school, a private academy for gifted children. Navarre believes his students are the youngest in the country to be involved in a formal flying course.

The aviation class began as an experiment last year with three youngsters. Navarre, who is the husband of Emerson director Jean Navarre, offered the use of the plane, which is owned by his construction company.

"These kids can really fly," says Navarre, although he admits he had to revise the course this year to reduce emotional strain on the young pilots.

We took out certain maneuvers — the stalls and spins — which the kids found a little frightening," he said. And because the students can't perform a stall, they can't land, Navarre adds.

Landings are executed by one of three adult flight instructors. An adult licensed pilot always sits at the duplicate set of controls in the plane. The adult also works the rudder for Vanessa, whose legs do not reach the cabin floor.

"You have to know your decimals and your angles," says Vanessa. "You have to know your clouds."

The syllabus for the course includes airplane nomenclature and function, basic air communication, radio navigation, weather and plotting a course.

Students learn principles of flight, how to read charts and use a compass. Some of the science and algebra involved in the course normally would be found at the high school levels, Navarre says, although Emerson enrolls students only from ages 4-13.

At the end of the course, the aviation students will earn their wings in a special test. The adult pilot will maneuver the student pilot and two student navigators off course and require them to use their navigational skills to get back to Ann Arbor.

Navarre believes Vanessa will be a fully qualified pilot by the time she is 12, if she continues flying. Federal Aviation Agency regulations, however, require applicants to be 16 before taking the licensing examination.

Clam's age is studied

WASHINGTON (AP) — The clam you eat in your chowder may be as old as your greatgrandmother, says National Geographic. According to research findings of Dr. Thompson, professor of geological and geophysical sciences at Princeton University, about 25 per cent of the clam samples are almost 100 years old.

There are thousands of species of clams, ranging from the tiny nut clam which measures 0.3 inches to the giant four-foot clam that can weigh more than 500 pounds.

Dr. Thompson's research on the ocean quahog clam is designed to establish a relationship between the growth rings of the clam's hinge plate and its age.

MEMO June 20, 1977

Dear Jim

In totaling your inventory for May 1977, I find a drastic increase over last year at this period.

Your inventory is much much to high. You need to reduce your inventory to maintain the proper balance of cash on hand.

In order to keep your selling prices as low as they have been and are now, you must raise additional cash to continue taking advantage of the manufactures discounts.

In purchasing for the 3 new stores you have over bought.

Due to soft market conditions our inventory has piled up.

It is my recommendation that you reduce your inventory by $35,000 to $40,000 immediately.

Sincerely
Linda Rehm

Chicago exhibits French drawings

CHICAGO (AP) — The homecoming of a selection of French drawings from the collection of the Art Institute of Chicago is the occasion for an exhibition of the pictures in the institute's galleries here.

Eighty-two pictures from the collection, one of the major ones of the world, have just returned from a tour to Paris and Frankfurt and are being shown through Aug. 28.

The exhibition, entitled "French Drawings from the Art Institute of Chicago: From Watteau to Picasso," was loaned initially to the Louvre museum in Paris. In exchange, the Art Institute will receive in 1979 a collection of 16th-century Italian drawings from the Louvre.

The works range from Antoine Watteau's red and black chalk drawing of "The Old Savoyard," done about 1725 to Pablo Picasso's black ink and wash drawing of "The Minotaur" done in 1933.

The exhibition is fascinating not only for its range of styles and media but also for the subject matter represented by these representational pictures.

One of the most appealing pictures is a simple pencil portrait of the composer Charles Gounod by Jean-Auguste-Dominique Ingres, done in 1841 The composer is depicted seated at a piano. Ingres did an equally appealing pencil portrait of Gounod's wife sitting in a chair.

Some of the drawings are of special interest because they are studies which preceded paintings that have become well known. One of these is trees drawn with fine-tipped black crayon by Georges Seurat in the mid-1880s as a preliminary study for his large, famous pointilist painting, "La Grande Jatte," which is in the permanent collection of the Art Institute.

Another such study is a nude by Auguste Renoir, also from the 1880s, for his painting "The Bathers." The flesh tones in this chalk study are even more alive than they are in the painting.

Jacques-Louis David's study for his famous "Oath of the Tennis Court" is a more cramped picture, but it is nevertheless of interest because of its role in the development of the larger work.

Among other well known artists whose work is included are: Francois Boucher, Jean-Honore Fragonard, Camille Corot, Honore Daumier, Jean-Francois Millet, Gustave Courbet, Edouard Manet, Gustave Dore, Edgar Degas, Henri Fantin-Latour, Paul Cezanne, Odilon Redon, Paul Gauguin, Henri de Toulouse-Lautrec, Pierre Bonnard, and Henri Matisse.

Hermann Neugebauer, president of the Viennese Medical Association, said recent reports showed women no longer live an average of 75 years and many men die before they reach 68. For a number of years, those had been the average life spans of Austrians.

Life expectancy had slowly declined, the doctor said, because traffic accidents, illnesses caused by environmental problems and too much good living had taken their tolls.

Neugebauer said Austrians drank, smoked and ate too much.

Starry-eyed, would-be heroes of tomorrow

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — They line the interstates around Nashville, hitchhiking into town with starry eyes or back home with punctured pride.

They share a goal. They want to be music stars.

Nashville, with record companies, studios and song publishing firms almost as plentiful as gas stations, attracts musicians the way Hollywood draws aspiring actresses.

They come to be discovered. But as in the Charlie Rich hit, the Nashville kingmakers are "behind closed doors."

As Lisa Scott, 19, of Wichita, Kan., trudged door-to-door along the famed Music Row trying to sell a song, she compiled a list of subtle signals telling her to move on:

He's out to lunch ... He has somebody in the office ... He's on a very important call ... He's in a meeting ... He's in the studio ... This is his day off.

She and dozens of others like her want to turn their talents into instant treasures as Dolly Parton did. Miss Parton left her Smoky mountain home, came by bus to Nashville and met her future husband the first day. Then she signed a recording contract, but not before she lived on hot dog relish and mustard for about two weeks.

Miss Scott saved $200 she earned playing with her group, "The Texas Two-Steppers," to spend two weeks in Nashville. She lost six pounds while budgeting her nickels as closely as she scrutinized her lyrics.

"The more you can live without, the longer you can stay here," she said.

Some take jobs such as pumping gas while trying to establish themselves in the music business. Others play for free at saloons, hoping a recording executive is in the crowd.

"I thought there would be talent scouts at these places, but they're not," lamented Michael Spence, 30, of Murfreesboro, Tenn. Spence said he played in bars at night for tips but had made only $10 in two weeks.

"In Texas I played in bars and made $20 or $25 a night, but not here; $1 here, 50 cents there don't get it."

Spence, a Waylon Jennings fan, quit his job as a $100-a-week furniture delivery man to come to Nashville with hopes of "getting a break — getting a record out."

"It's hard to go home and say you've failed, but I'm not the first and won't be the last."

As Spence spoke, Jimmy Elks and his bride pulled into town, bought a newspaper and scanned the classified ads for an apartment.

Elks, 44, with long gray hair, had been singing in Bradenton, Fla., for the past 2½ years and has recorded on minor labels. Now he's determined to move up to major companies.

"I'm gonna pound the streets and beat on the doors," he said as he ate a bacon sandwich at Linebaugh's Restaurant a block from the old Grand Ole Opry house.

"I'm going to stay as long as it takes, even if I have to put up a tent in front of RCA. I'm going to be on their front step every morning, saying, 'Can I help you unlock the door?' They won't starve me out; we're here to stay."

George Tomsco, 37, of Kansas City, was walking on Music Row, carrying his guitar and a small suitcase of songs. He headed for Nashville when the rock group, "The Fireballs" best known for their hits "Sugar Shack" and "Bottle of Wine," broke up.

"Nashville is a pretty closed shop," he said. "Someone has to be interested in some phase of you before you can get in and do anything. You've got to have a good song or potential, or know somebody if you don't have one of those two."

'All we can try to do is cope with it, make it work better . . .'

EDITOR'S NOTE: Like many other governors — and for that matter, like President Carter — Jerry Brown took office with high hopes of reducing paper shuffling, red tape, overregulation, and the bureaucracy itself. All of which is easier said than done, as the following report shows.

By DOUG WILLIS
Associated Press Writer

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Shortly after Edmund Brown Jr. became governor of California in 1975 he decreed a ban on state-issued briefcases for bureaucrats.

It was symbolic declaration of intent. The governor said paperwork just expanded to fill the briefcases. He meant to cut down on paper, red tape, and the bureaucracy itself. He even went after the jargon of officialdom — "codes and private language," he called it.

How stands the 39-year-old governor's war with the bureaucracy 2½ years later? Somewhat ruefully, Brown concedes he isn't winning it.

"All we can try to do is cope with it, make it work better," he said in an interview. "I've tried to eliminate some agencies, but they keep coming back.

Brown wiped out one state regulatory agency and cut significantly into three others. But he also helped create three new state regulatory agencies and is proposing another to regulate hospital rates.

"His goal is commendable, but I haven't seen any appreciable change. It isn't any worse or any better. It's government as usual," says Craig Biddle, a former Republican leader of the legislature who now lobbies for businesses and trade groups.

"I am concerned about the proliferation of government programs under the guise of doing something that they don't do," Brown told his first national television audience in a 1975 interview.

"We have manpower training programs that were supposed to put people to work. All they did was put manpower trainers to work, not manpower trainees."

He abolished a complex system of prior authorization for doctor care for state Medi-Cal patients, eliminating 63 staff positions, 1.7 million reports annually and $466,000 a year in administrative costs.

State-required environmental impact reports fro building projects have been trimmed nearly two-thirds in mength. Smaller projects have been excluded from coverage, but critics say most of those filings still are excessive and irrelevant.

Brown abolished a state meat inspection program that duplicated federal efforts, eliminated milk price minimums and the jobs of 46 persons enforcing them, and cut three-quarters of the staff of planners and evaluators in a division that processed law enforcement grants.

But he also supported creation of three new state agencies: The Agricultural Labor Relations Board, 272 employes and an $8.8-million budget; the Fair Political Practices Commission, 45 employes and $1.3 million, and the Educational Employment Relations Board, 80 employes and $3.1 million.

Bob Monagan, president of the California Manufacturers Association and a Republican former chief of the state Assembly, says he is optimistic that Brown will cut into state regulations and forms, "but not a great deal has happened yet.

"The big difference is that at least they're talking about it. And when the governor talks about trying to change these things, that's important. Maybe it affects some attitudes."

Brown's personal troubleshooter in the big Health Department, former prisons chief Ray Procunier, calls the state's health regulations "a mess."

"Once we get them up to date, I'm going to go back and start writing them in the English language. If we don't, I'm convinced the whole system is going to come to a halt over damn complicated regulations."

Brown still complains that too much of government is bureaucracy, but his hopes of simplifying now are more modest.

"Red tape is the flip side of government confronting problems," Brown says. "Wherever you look, people are looking to government to arbitrate some dispute or another, or provide some service, and that just makes government more complicated.

"Each year bureaucracy expands, under very conservative governments and under very liberal governments, because people want government to do things. People focus on a need, and a law is passed. That creates a new agency, a new set of requirements, all of which spawn what people complain about as red tape."

As automation occurs and institutions grow, society's need to have extensive institutional comunication expands, Brown said.

"That means more paper. It creates a lot of anonymity. But it also has made a lot of progress possible."

Variety adds to English language

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — A bushranger by any other name is a robber. For that matter, a skookum-house is a jail, a devil-dodger a clergyman, a smell fungus a critic.

If you're a nipcheese you're a miser, or if you're a lounge lizard you're a hanger-on.

All of these peculiar words are actually part of the English language. They are synonyms for the more familiar words. Schnorrer, for instance, is a synonym for beggar, Meddlesome Mattie a synonym for busybody.

If you're trying to find a different way of saying something, what you're looking for is a synonym. The use of synonyms may not make Johnny a better reader, language experts admit, but they just might make him a better writer. If nothing else, they add, his language will be more expressive.

"Often, a person is not seeking an exact synonym but a more appropriate term than the one he has in mind," says Dr. Maire Weir Kay, a synonymist and editor of Webster's Collegiate Thesaurus, recently published by G. & C. Merriman Co.

"The user may want a word stronger or weaker in force, or of slightly different meaning. Perhaps a folksy word or idiom is wanted," Dr. Kay notes.

Are you looking for another word for "devil," for instance? The Thesaurus lists Old Gooseberry, fiend, Lucifer, Old Scratch, Cloot, Old Nick and Beelzebub. Idiomatically, he is the "Prince of Darkness." A wicked person is an archfied, a Satan or a succubus.

A swindler, according to Merriam, can be a buncm steerer, a Peter Funk, a flimflammer, a diddler, or a highbinder. A swamp is a puxy as well as a quagmire, a prophet is a haruspex, to neglect is to pretermit.

If huge becomes a bore try Antaean, Brobdingnagian, dinosauric, mastodonic, or pythonic.

To replace termite-ridden huts

By Michael Goldsmith
Associated Press Writer

LAMBARENE, Gabon (AP) — A new $6 million Albert Schweitzer hospital complex is rising on the banks of the Ogooue River here to replace the termite-ridden collection of huts the late medical missionary built after coming to Africa 64 years ago.

Administering the project is a former French army commando sergeant who came to the hospital after reading a small advertisement in a church magazine.

Max Caulet, 56-year-old veteran of World War II, the French-Indochina war and the Algerian war of independence, says he dislikes being called "the new Schweitzer."

"What matters here is not this or that individual but the Schweitzer spirit that animates all of us who work to preserve this unique institution," he said in his office hut overlooking the steamy Ogooue.

A few yards away, the workers of what Caulet proudly calls "the Albert Schweitzer construction company" were busy erecting the new complex begun on Jan. 1.

Like the 10-member expatriate medical staff of mainly Swiss doctors and nurses, the architects and builders are semi-volunteers who came to this remote spot in Gabon's equatorial rain forest on 18-month contracts earning a mere fraction of what they could earn at home.

Schweitzer established his jungle hospital here in 1913 and was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in 1952 for his life's work. His worldwide renown kept charitable funds flowing in during his lifetime, but after he died in 1965 at the age of 90 the flow became a trickle and the long-outmoded hospital seemed doomed.

Caulet, then working as administrator of vineyard and forest estates in southern France, was recruited through the ad in a Protestant magazine in 1971 to try to put the financial situation in order.

He said he found the hospital equipment worn out, the wooden buildings in danger of collapse and the staff demoralized. Albert Schweitzer committees in the United States and many European countries were still collecting funds, but organizational difficulties and a lack of wholehearted response brought minimal returns.

The United States offered $1 million toward a reconstruction project, but more more was needed for the plan and to meet the hospital's $2,500-a-day running costs. To make matters worse, the Gabon government of President Albert-Bernard Bongo, cool toward what it regarded as the hospital's paternalistic traditions, was threatening to take it over and turn it into a state institution.

Although Schweitzer was admired by the African population for hundreds of miles around his hospital, some government officials in distant Libreville, the capital, considered him a white supremacist at heart.

No black physician ever worked in the Schweitzer hospital as a permanent member of the medical staff, but now there are 50 black nurses, many of them being trained by the hospital.

Opposition to the hospital also came from outside Africa, where some governments and private donors questioned the need for a charity institution in oil-rich Gabon, one of Africa's wealthiest countries.

By 1975 Caulet was ready to give up. He told the leaders of the various Schweitzer committees that the hospital would have to close down unless they agreed to a complete reorganization. Caulet said Schweitzer supporters in America and Western Europe then gave him full powers to rescue the hospital and appointed him president of a new international foundation based in Lambarene. For the first time since Schweitzer's death, a single individual was in charge.

The new hospital will have beds for 180 patients.

Adversary roles created

There is one thing on which both the teachers and administration in the Bonita Unified School District can agree, the Rodda Act has created adversary roles for both groups where none, or at least a greatly limited one, existed before.

This is first most noticeable, said Bonita Unified Teachers Association (BUTA) Vice President Dick Gale last fall when the teachers felt the need to include in their contract items relating to their rights and working conditions. While the district has contended that such items fall outside the realm of the Rodda Act, teachers feel they are appropriate due to the wording of the law. The matter, says Gale, will be resolved in court.

Gale says the teachers also agree that the wage dispute was the big dispute in the district last year leading to the year with no contract.

Among BUTA's contentions, says Gale are:

—The fact that the district received the single largest increase ($800,000) in its budget for a one-year period in the district's history.

—The fact that schools Supt. James Johnson has always maintained that he wanted to see the dis-

The Bonita Unified School District, serving La Verne and San Dimas, was one of only two districts in Los Angeles County (the other was West Covina) which failed to reach agreement on a contract with its teachers last year under California's new collective bargaining law, the Rodda Act.

Stories by Dan Niebrugge
PB Staff Writer

The district has undergone a year of strife, frustration, a teacher walkout and low morale which has included attempts at settlement on a contract involving all of the collective bargaining law's provisions from negotiations to mediation to fact finding.

Johnson cites funds lack

Supt. of Schools James Johnson feels that the dispute never would have reached the proportions it ultimately did if the district had been able to come up with the funds for a 6 per cent increase in teachers salaries.

"I can't manufacture money," said Johnson in noting that the raise in income the district received last year — which amounted to about $800,000 — was well committed to other areas besides salary increases before the district even got the money.

Johnson said last fall's negotiations got off to a bad start when teachers began wanting included in their contract items that fell outside the realm of the Rodda Act. For example, he said, teachers wanted clauses in the contract dealing with non descrimination, personal and academic freedom, teaching conditions and other items already covered in existing law and well outside the scope of the Rodda Act.

"We could talk about them and discuss them," said Johnson, "but the law does not allow for them to be included in the contract."

Johnson said the inclusion of such items in the contract could be

YOU TALK THROUGH THIS

Students in Bill Teague's Citizen Band radio summer class at Berlyn School in the Ontario-Montclair School District learn first-hand about CB's. They eagerly ask questions because the class is "stimulating," says Teague. Pupils learn to handle the radio and to communicate.

'Super Jock' comes in; CBers communicating

By JON MORRIS
PB Staff Writer

"Super Jock" was communicating with the girl who lives in the green house across the street from Berlyn School in Ontario.

"Kiss-ey, kiss-ey," he said, with a touch of affection.

Amazingly enough, it was all part of a Citizen Band radio course being offered this summer to fifth and sixth graders at Berlyn School.

Bill Teague, the teacher, has the CB handle (name) of "Super Jock." It stems from the fact that Teague loves athletics and was an outstanding prep baseball player in Pomona some years ago.

Teague regularly talks to the girl in the green house because she, too, is a CBer. But he isn't selfish — he allows all 24 of his students to use his CB radio also.

The children have CB handles just like Teague — Bobby Catuara is "Big Ragu," Bobby Sharp is "Blue Knight," and Sandy Bakkila is "Super Chicken."

Other students are called "Super Dude," "Comet," "Beach Bunny," "Mudpuppy," "Lightning Bug" and "Devil Chaser."

Teague's CB class is probably the first of its kind being offered to elementary school youngsters in the valley.

He believes in motivating children and considers the course a "real life situation."

Most important of all is the course teaches students to communicate and use the CB radio properly, says Teague. "This course stimulates students' interest. We don't want teaching to stop in the classroom; we should take it and apply it to everyday happenings."

Teague starts off by teaching students federal rules and regulations surrounding use of CB's. Later the kids learn to send and receive messages.

Pupils have to memorize what Teague calls the "10-code," which includes the well-known "10-4" (affirmative).

Other codes include 10-30 (illegal use of radio), 10-33 (emergency), 10-51 (tow truck needed), 10-55 (drunk driver), 10-200 (police needed), and 10-100 (nature calls).

By the time students complete Teague's six-week class, they should know how to use the radio for emergencies, traffic accidents, and just plain talking with fellow CB'ers.

Teague cautions that by law, one must be 18 to use a Citizen Band radio on a regular basis, so his fifth and sixth graders will have to wait for that.

But in the meantime they are finding the CB course "fun, exciting and a good way of communicating," according to the teacher.

Teague has only been a CBer himself for six months, ever since he watched a friend use the radio in his car. He began showing his sixth graders how to use it during recess this spring.

Later, he decided to propose a CB course to school administrators and "they bought it," he said. He started off with 32 enthusiastic youngsters this summer and the class now has 24.

"The reason this course has been successful is that it's a real life situation and we're teaching kids to communicate," Teague said.

THIS IS VALENTINE. . .'

Vicki Tillman, also known by her CB handle, "Valentine," talks with another CBer by way of Bill Teague's radio in summer school class at Berlyn School in Ontario.

LEARNING ABOUT CB'S

John Almazon, known by his CB handle of "Little Fox," keeps a chart of other CB'ers who communicate with he and his classmates. Instructor Bill Teague talks to students about trials and tribulations of the CB radio. The pupils are Bryan Flynn, left, ("Dizzy Dan"), and Toni Aleman ("Beach Bunny"). Teague feels class promotes a "real life situation."

Reclamation is a big hit

After a decade of nationwide handwringing over desecration of the environment, senseless waste of limited energy reserves and depletion of valuable natural resources, there finally is some good news to report.

It comes from the aluminum industry, which has established a little noticed but highly successful reclamation and recycling program that already is producing an ecological and economic bonanza.

According to the Aluminum Association, the industry last year recovered more than 4.8 billion used beer and soft drink cans — a figure which represents at least 25 per cent of the entire 1976 output.

Moreover, the success of the program during the past 10 years indicates that the industry may soon be able to recover and recycle 50 to 60 per cent of its annual can production. In California and Texas, the reclamation rate already has reached 40 per cent.

That's more than just a trade association claim. Even the environmentalists who have been most critical of waste and inefficiency in the packaging industry now acknowledge that the aluminum manufacturers have attained a significant level of resource recycling.

"The economics of recycling aluminum do seem to be somewhat promising," a tough-minded environmentalist admits. "We still think that the refillable bottle makes better overall sense, but the aluminum people have made more progress than expected."

One particularly significant aspect of the program is that it relies heavily on citizens to gather and bring to collection centers the empty cans as well as lawn furniture frames, house siding, pots and pans, pie plates and other aluminum products.

Housewives, schoolchildren, civic clubs, church groups and other participants are paid 17 cents a pound. Last year, about $35 million was paid out by the nation's three principal aluminum producers — Aluminum Company of America, Reynolds Metals and Kaiser Aluminum & Chemical.

The growth of the reclamation program has been truly phenomenal. The first recycling center was opened by Reynolds in early 1967 at a Miami, Fla. location. Five years later there were 675 locations in 31 states.

Today there are more than 2,200 reclamation points scattered throughout all 50 states, ranging from beer distributors' warehouses to shopping center parking lots. The number of cans recovered has soared at a similar rate.

Last year, 213 million pounds of aluminum were reclaimed by the industry — enough to produce the aluminum components for about 2.1 million passenger cars or to provide storm windows for almost 1.5 million homes.

Environmental experts point out that the program isn't motivated exclusively by the industry's altruistic concern over unsightly litter or squandered natural resources.

"They're doing it for economic reasons, not to clean up the roadside," says Marchant Wentworth of the Environmental Action Foundation. "First, aluminum is lightweight, so cheap transportation back to the mill is feasible."

"Even more important," he says, "it takes 20 times as much energy to make aluminum from scratch than by reprocessing waste products—so the industry saves a lot of money even after buying back its used cans."

The production of aluminum from raw materials does indeed require vast amounts of energy, most of it electricity. Industry officials acknowledge that they can recycle the metal back into igot form using only 5 per cent of the energy necessary to process bauxite ore.

The apparent key to the program's popularity is money — millions of dollars saved by the aluminum companies and millions more earned by citizen can collectors. The lesson is obvious: Other environmental and energy conservation schemes probably won't succeed without similar economic incentives.

Washington's new leak

Congress has passed and President Carter signed a bill appropriating $4.7 million to repair the leaky roof of the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performong Arts in Washington.

Of course $4.7 million isn't much money by Washington standards, but still there is a useful lesson in the Kennedy Center's drip drip drip.

The building is only five years old and took a whopping $73 million to build. You would think for that money the bureaucracy could get a tight structure or would sue the daylights out of the contractor. Apparently it can do neither.

Now getting a proper roof on a costly cultural palace and, to take another example, delivering a parcel post package without smashing it should be fairly simple feats.

Yet the bureaucrats who are incapable of performing them ask the country to trust them to handle really complicated matters, such as fine-tuning the economy and running the energy business. Hmm.

Dear Editor:

Your editorial against Laetrile, July 6, suffered from "factual anemia" that was most "acute" when it said: " . . . because all the scientific evidence so far indicates Laetrile is utterly worthless . . . " The greatest perpetuator of false premises is propaganda. That's why he who writes an editorial must research his subject instead of parroting the political establishment and wealthy pressure groups that pay for think-tanks.

Let's hope that one of your writers will read Edward Griffin's masterpiece of documentation, "World Without Cancer," or "Vitamin B-17 — Forbidden Weapon Against Cancer" by Mike Culbert, editor of the Berkeley Gazette, or "The Laetrile/Nitrilosides in the Prevention and Control of Cancer" by Dr. Ernest T. Krebs, Jr., or "A Solution to the Cancer Problem" by Dr. C. Moerman, or "Laetrile Case Histories: The Richardson Cancer Clinic Experience" by John A. Richardson, M.D. and Patricia Griffin, R.N.

Then he'll want to write a series of editorials telling why the American Cancer Society, the F.D.A. and the drug industry want to cover up the wondrous effects of this natural vitamin. When the editorial insinuated that a doctor treating with Laetrile is a "quack," my respect went up — for ducks, they at least know where the "quack" is!

White-hot red tape blues

WASHINGTON — Each generation has its King George III — a home-grown demagogue if not a foreign despot; a corporate or union monopolist if not a slave holder. All have taken their turns at clipping the wings of freedom.

The ascendant danger of our day is the government bureaucrat. Because his services are many and indispensable, his threat to free choice is unique. His penetration of the control towers of our society is the deeper because it comes by lawful invitation; the more insidious because its aim is often benevolent; the more disarming because its weapons are paper clips; its fortresses are often unpretentious and its buoys unmenacing, even friendly.

Yet King George III, in all his arrogance and panoply, never dared aspire to the power over us that has been quietly accumulated by the tyrant in the cubicle.

Not too long ago, we Americans were distinctive throughout the world as a breed of self-starters, innovators, doers. Now, bound up in red tape, we are being reduced to a nation of paper-shuffling petitioners, forever waiting for permission from some government office for our next step, continually putting aside the work of the world in order to fill out forms.

The complaints we receive paint a disturbing composite picture of an America increasingly immobilized by bureaucracy. A farmer's tractor stands idle in the corn fields while he struggles with crop reports for the Dept. of Agriculture. A would-be educator is bureaucratized, trying to master a 17-page instruction manual from the Office of Education on how to fill out 15-page applications for aid to needy students.

A plant manager is in a dither over safety regulations. The white lines he had painted on the shop floor to mark off aisles must be repainted yellow. The fire extinguishers fastened on the walls at a height of five feet must be lowered to four feet. In the lavatory, the old-style toilet seats must be replaced with the "split" model; and coat hangers must be put on the doors of the stalls. Meanwhile, the production line languishes.

A citizen who is no longer sure of his rights is on the way to the Internal Revenue office for an audit after wasting days of preparation and losing sleepless nights of worry. He is one of two million to be audited this year; two million Americans must explain and defend the trivia of their lives to the government.

Some of the cost of regulations can be measured in dollars, although with only rough accuracy. The cost of merely filling out government forms has been calculated at $40 billion a year. The direct and indirect cost of complying with projected regulations has been placed variously at between $120 billion and $180 billion.

General Motors claims that the documents it files in a typical year, in connection with the certification of its cars for sale, would make a stack 15 stories high. Well, General Motors has much to account for; but, on the other hand, the pioneer like old Henry Ford could not even dream of going into the car business today in a small garage without even a Xerox machine.

Many government regulations are necessary; many bureaucrats are effective public servants; few question that. But the aggregate picture produced by regulations-run-wild is of a nation whose vision is blinkered, whose pace is hobbled, whose substance is wasted and whose progress is dribbling to a halt.

What is needed is a national Declaration of Independence from the bureaucracy. We recommend consideration of the following general planks, fully realizing that some of them, after study, may prove insupportable:

First, the rampaging growth of regulation must be slowed. Politicians used to build reputations by getting laws passed; we must begin to judge them by the regulations they repeal and the agencies they liquidate.

— Sunset laws, by which each government agency is automatically terminated after five or 10 years unless it proves the case for its re-establishment, ought to be given tryouts.

— Before enacting a new law, Congress should require a harassment impact statement, which would seek to envision all the ways the laws could be administered that would plague the citizen. The ruling axiom should be that what is possible will, in fact, occur.

— To combat the time-honored practice by which money appropriated to aid the poor is diverted to the payrolls and perquisites of the bureaucracy, each new program should mandate a limit on the percentage that can go to administration.

—Second, we must consider ways of emphasizing that the American citizen is a sovereign to be respected and not a mere subject to be shunted around.

—Consideration should be given to government compensation of individuals and businesses of the cost of carrying out some, although not all, regulations.

—Certainly, the cost of complying should be estimated on all regulations and made public. All compensation in such cases should come out of the budget of the agency involved.

—Finally, measures must be taken to reduce the bureaucrat's feeling of splendid insulation from the people.

—Pay raises should no longer be automatic, according to an immutable public formula, free of public control.

—Dismissal from the government payroll for poor performance should not be as difficult as it now is.

— A citizen should be able to know the identity of the civil servant responsible for any decision and should be able to proceed against the official in special tribunals and in courts in any case of maladministration.

It is late but not too late for a massive shift of power from those who wield it, the bureaucracy, to those who are its source, the people.

Chicago "Killer for hire"

Chicago is not shockproof.

Chicago is still in shock — from the news that a reputed syndicate gunman — for all his police record — and despite witnesses to the murder who identified him as the killer — goes free.

Trying to shake the shock, Chicagoans are cynically suggesting Harry Aleman advertise in the Yellow Pages: "Killer for hire!"

Harry Aleman was accused of being a hired gun for the Chicago underworld — accused of being a "hit man" whose most recent murder was of a union leader.

It was that murder for which he was brought to trial.

Another witness said that she was offered a $10,000 bribe by Aleman if she would lie . . . and that if she refused . . . her brother would "get it."

The bribe and the threat were reported to investigators — but Chicago Judge Frank Wilson refused to allow the woman to testify on those subjects.

Let me explain that Aleman's defense lawyers sought and got a trial by this one judge — rather than by a jury.

News stories reported that Judge Wilson, shortly before this trial, received in the mail a doctored photograph showing members of his own family, their bodies mutilated.

Wilson denies it.

State's Attorney Bernard Carey thought he had an airtight case against Aleman; said in his years as a lawman he'd never seen a stronger case.

Yet Aleman is now free and the number-one witness to the killing — who identified Aleman as the killer — who spent months in the protective custody of police — now says he's "waiting to be killed."

Bobby Lowe says, "I sacrificed my life for nothing."

Chicago homicide commander, Joe Leonardi, says, "Without people like Bobby Lowe there is no way we in law enforcement can break up that animalistic organization called the 'crime syndicate.'"

The other witness against Aleman — a hired killer presently in prison who testified that he drove the getaway car from which he says Aleman shotgunned that union official to death —

That witness cannot expect to survive his prison term.

Aleman — once described as the most-feared assassin in the underworld — is being investigated by the federal government in connection with several other killings, but it is inconceivable that witnesses will witness again.

But any professional journalist on the Chicago police beat has the underworld "who's who" in his head.

After most any Cicero sendoff, the MO points to somebody we know. But proving these things and making charges stick require courageous witnesses, dedicated and capable prosecutors and unintimidatable, incorruptible judges.

This was the kind of case the state waits years for — the one time when the noose is complete — when witnesses are willing —

Chicago will wait a long time for another.

A loss of compassion

By MARTHA ANGLE and ROBERT WALTERS

WASHINGTON (NEA) — There is a certain meanness of spirit creeping into the record of the 95th Congress which can only be construed as a disturbing reflection of the mood of the nation's comfortable majority.

With precious little charity and considerable malice, the people's elected representatives are seemingly out to punish the poor and the powerless at home and abroad.

A case in point is the congressional rush to cut off federal funding for abortions, a move that will deny to the poor — but not the well-off — an opportunity to exercise what the Supreme Court has defined as a constitutional right.

Let's face it. Prohibiting the use of Medicaid money to pay for abortions does absolutely nothing to settle the question of whether ANY woman should be able to obtain an abortion on demand. It simply makes it impossible for POOR women to do so.

Legal aid for the poor is in jeopardy on Capitol Hill, although the money involved — some $217 million — is a pittance in relationship to the federal budget as a whole.

The House has voted to deny veterans benefits to Vietnam-era servicemen whose less-than-honorable discharges may be upgraded on a case-by-case basis by the Carter administration.

Those who suffer will not be the well-to-do college kids who evaded military service by hook or by crook, but men from the lowest rungs of the economic and social ladder who failed in one way or another to measure up to rigid military standards. In some of those cases, mitigating circumstances may warrant an upgrading of their discharges — but the House would render such corrective action hollow indeed.

The hostility towards the less fortunate extends to the rest of the world, as well. The House has voted to chop nearly $1 billion from President Carter's modest foreign aid program for the world's neediest nations.

Both House and Senate are scrambling to prohibit any kind of U.S. aid, direct or indirect, to war-battered Vietnam, despite the unqualified success of America's post-World War II assistance to Germany and Japan.

Can we be magnanimous only in victory? As Rep. Paul Simon, D-Ill., noted, "unlike Japan, Vietnam did not attack us. We went over there at the invitation of the government then in power and bombed the life out of much of the country."

There is ample evidence, from recent public opinion polls, that Congress is reflecting the popular sentiment in its punitive votes against welfare recipients at home and poor nations abroad.

The Roper Organization, for instance, found that in the past three years, the percentage of people who believe the government spends too much on welfare has increased from 48 to 59 per cent. The same survey showed 67 per cent of those questioned think the U.S. spends too much on foreign aid.

Paradoxically, another recent poll by Yankelovich, Skelly and White shows 90 per cent of us think our own families are doing well (up from 83 per cent two years ago), and 60 per cent believe the country is doing well (up from 18 per cent).

So why, with our own sense of well-being on the upswing, are we so reluctant to extend a helping hand to others?

Perhaps it is the cumulative impact of Vietnam, Watergate and the recession which threatened us all to one degree or another. Perhaps a period of retrenchment was inevitable.

We have learned, the hard way, that government cannot solve all the ills of America or the world, and that is a healthy development. But has the pendulum swung too far?

The loss of innocence is acceptable, even desirable. A loss of compassion, of idealism, is not.

What people say

"Overall it is evident that significant relationships exist between economic policy and measures of national well-being."

— Dr. M. Harvey Brenner, of Johns Hopkins University, head of a committee which reported in a new Congressional study that increased deaths, suicides and murders were traceable to increased unemployment.

Bridging the generation gap

Dear Ann: The attached appeared in The Helping Hand newsletter of the Missouri Care Association. I hope you will print it.

Tons of books and articles have been written for parents to help them bridge the generation gap. Now, at long last, Rev. John Boquet of Neenah, Wisconsin, has come up with six wonderful suggestions for teenagers who want to establish a better relationship with their parents. The key, he says, is understanding. Hopefully, his helpful hints will result in a little peace at home. If you decide to use the item, Ann, PLEASE start out with " 'Dear Teen-ager:' "

1. DON'T BE AFRAID TO SPEAK THEIR LANGUAGE. Try to use a few strange-sounding phrases like, " 'I'll help with the dishes,' " and " "Yes.'"

2. TRY TO UNDERSTAND THEIR MUSIC. Play Glenn Miller's "Moonlight Serenade'" on the stereo until you're accustomed to the sound.

3. BE PATIENT WITH THE UNDER-ACHIEVER. When you catch your dieting mom sneaking salted peanuts, don't show disapproval. Tell her you like fat mothers!

4. ENCOURAGE YOUR PARENTS TO TALK ABOUT THEIR PROBLEMS. Try to keep in mind that to them, things like earning a living, paying off the mortage and decent family moral standards are important.

5. BE TOLERANT OF THEIR APPEARANCE. When your dad gets a haircut, don't feel personally humiliated. Remember, he may want to look like his peers.

6. MOST IMPORTANT OF ALL: If your parents do something you consider wrong, let them know it is their behavior you dislike, not them. Remember parents need to feel loved and no one can do it as well as you — their children. — J.J.L., K.C., Mo.

Dear J.J.L.: Rev. Boquet is a very cool cat. And YOU know a good item when you see one! Thanks for sharing.

Dear Ann Landers: I have never written to you before but I can remain silent no longer. I've had it with those widows who write and say we wives should be thankful that our husbands are beside us — snoring up a storm.

I love my husband very much. He is a wonderful man, but his snoring is an abomination. Without adequate sleep, I am a nervous wreck. The only solution was an arrangement that would allow us both to get a good night's rest. This is how I dealt with my sensitive snorer:

I placed a box spring on the living room floor and a mattress on top of it (both twin-size). I covered the setup with fake fur and made two tall, sloping pillows for the head. My husband and I enjoy reclining there in the evening while watching TV. When he's ready to doze off he goes to the bedroom. I pull the covers back in the living room and settle in for a good night's sleep. He doesn't feel rejected because we have plenty of togetherness and neither one of us misses out on anything. No name, please, just — Utah

Dear Utah: Makes sense to me. I recommend it.

Too late for coin turnstiles

All the old men who too late understood the situation died long ago. Possibly they brooded themselves to death. They were involved in the development of a mass transit system that eventually proved to be the safest, the most dependable, the best by far, inasmuch as it operated without noise or fumes. And it was free to the users. That's what made those old men brood. It was free! Why hadn't somebody had the foresight right at the outset to put coin-operated entry-only turnstiles in front of all the nation's elevators? Too late, too late.

SINGLE MEN AND CRIME

Even though single men make up only 13 per cent of the population over age 14, they comprise about 60 per cent of the criminals who commit violent crimes. Remember that, young fellow. If you want to improve your chances of staying out of the pen, get married.

At birth, the human heart weighs considerably less than does a half a hen's egg. Just about the same as the gin in a short jigger, in fact. Almost exactly as much as a quarter, dime, nickel and penny put together.

Observed Dr. Paul Samuelson, MIT's Nobel prize-winning economist: "If you turn the present recession upside down and read on the bottom, it will say: "Made in Washington."

There are those who contend that the game of soccer under another name, too, originated in China.

FRIENDSHIPS

Who does the most, the husband or the wife, to initiate family friendship? Researchers at the University of Nebraska contend their studies prove that the husband is three times more likely to be the one to start up such relationships. Interesting, if true. But my guess is the wife is the one far more often than not who keeps the thing going from week to week by arranging getogethers.

Unhappy people don't eat popcorn. They eat pickles, olives, potato chips, peanuts and candy. But not popcorn. Can you deny that?

Cool doghouse very important

DEAR DR. MILLER: I just saw a chart that showed a hot doghouse should be painted white, because it's cooler. Don't you think that's a good tip to pass along to your doggie readers? — L.D.

DEAR L.D.: Certainly. And to dog owners, too. Unfortunately, a hot dog house will still be an undesirable spot for a canine, no matter what the house's color. Of more importance for cooling it would be shade — either locating the doghouse so it's naturally shaded, or fitting it out with a poochhouse parasol, a sun umbrella, or whatever.

DEAR DR. MILLER: My young daughter was very fond of Chickie, even though it didn't even live overnight. She first got attached because she was incubating the fertile egg that Chickie hatched from. She was very proud of her accomplishment, but the chick didn't seem to know how to eat. Do you suppose it was just sick enough that it didn't want food when it was born? Could there be such a thing as a chick too dumb to know how to eat? If there is such a thing, how do you teach it? — N.S.

DEAR N.S.: Chickie's chances of making it out of the shell utilizing such incubation techniques were slight. Once it was out of the egg, it was still in trouble, for the chances of most newborn pets belonging to young children are decidedly poor. Whether Chickie was simply too weak or merely needed a teacher to get it started eating is hard to say — probably both. Newborn chicks on their own can often be stimulated to eat chick mash by wiggling your finger through it a few times while it's watching.

Or, try placing small live maggots in the meal to wiggle and thus attract the chick's attention. When this doesn't work, the best system of all is to find a farm chick who has already learned the ropes. It could teach the not-so-slick city chick that vital survival technique, eating.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Ringworm. Ugh. What a bad time it gave us. Our two children and Bumpers, their cat, came down with it at the same time. What a battle we had to get rid of it. Finally it's gone, but we're wondering if we should wait awhile before getting our second cat? And if so, how long? — R.O.

DEAR R.O.: Your best advisor regarding this question would be Bumpers' own doctor. A clue: Microsporum canis (the most common cause of such ringworm outbreaks) may survive in sporulated form in the house for more than a year.

Counts on kids to conserve

I tell you, you wouldn't believe the way my children have really pitched in and tried to conserve energy during this nationwide crisis.

They've kicked all their dirty clothes under the bed to save on the gallons of water it takes to wash them.

They've insisted that the stove or oven not be turned on and that we all go out and eat in a modest but exhorbitantly-priced restaurant.

They gave up showers before bed without even being asked.

The other afternoon when we got into the car, my son said, "We've got to pick up Todd, Mike, Wendell, Tony and Steve."

When I slumped over the wheel in anticipation of an extra 45 minutes of driving, he said, "After all, Mom, it's un-American not to carpool."

They cut back on going to the dentist to once a year to save gas.

They put a brick in the commode. (I wish someone had told them it goes in the BACK of the commode.)

They're maintaining their policy of "Never flushing unless she can hear you."

They let the garbage stack up for three days by the sink to keep from opening the door and losing precious air-conditioning.

They play their stereos at 1 in the morning to take the load off of peak time.

They leave the ice cube trays empty to reduce the wear and tear on the refrigeration.

The other morning as I counted 63 glasses by the sink, I said, "Boys, you really amaze me at how you picked up on President Carter's plan to conserve energy."

They smiled, "When we get to 85 glasses then we can start the dishwasher."

"In fact, I'm so proud of you, I think I'll do a column on it and tell my readers of your heroic efforts."

"That's not necessary, Mom," said a son leaning over to unplug my IBM. "Just look upon this as a blow for democ."

Dr. Lamb

A painful kidney problem

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have a dropped kidney similar to the problem you wrote about in your column. The pain gets unbearable until I lie down. I've been all over trying to get relief for this pain and no doctor mentions what is causing it.

I do have kidney stones in both kidneys and they always blame the pain on passing stones but the pain comes every day and I don't pass stones.

I went to the Mayo Clinic and they couldn't find a definite cause for the pain and thought it could be a back muscle so I'm taking heat treatments that haven't done a bit of good.

I'm 46 and weigh 100 pounds and need to work. The pain gets so severe I feel I will faint. Then I lie down on my back and it is gone in five minutes. I've told this to four different doctors. One put me on nerve pills and I know he thought I imagine it, but I sure don't need nerve pills and don't want the pain. I want to work.

Could you please tell me what I should do? I don't have very good insurance and I just can't afford to go to any more doctors for nothing.

DEAR READER - As I mentioned in my original column about dropped kidneys they occur in about one in five adult women. They are usually on the right side, usually asymptomatic. They often require no treatment.

There is one big exception and that is the person who has a story that sounds like yours. In these people the kidney drops and kinks the artery, vein and ureter that drain the kidney when it falls. The pain is severe and may be accompanied by nausea, vomiting, and severe low blood pressure, causing a shock-like response. The pain and symptoms characteristically disappear in a few minutes after the person lies down. The sudden relief of the pain while lying down is the real tip-off as to the cause of the problem.

This condition is dignified by the term Dietl's crisis. When you go back to Mayo Clinic tell you doctor you have attacks of Dietl's crisis.

The difficulty in establishing this diagnosis is that some people with psychological problems often complain of more vague complaints than yours which are sometimes wrongly attributed to a dropped kidney. The severe attacks and sudden relief you describe though are so typical that I would think the diagnosis would not be in question.

What can you do about it? That is more difficult. In extreme cases the kidney or kidneys can be surgically tacked up in position where they won't fall down. Otherwise the trick is to not spend so much time on your feet. The problem occurs most often in thin people like you. Gaining some weight often helps. You might also get some help with a firm girdle to wear when you must be up a long time. Exercises to strengthen your abdominal muscles may help also.

While I don't expect you to have a "bay window" problem at 100 pounds I am sending you The Health Letter number 3-7, Girth Control: Avoiding the Big Middle. You can use the exercises in it to help your abdominal muscles. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. It is usually for people who have trouble with an expanding waist line. Just send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Children can handle truth

By R. CLIFF WATERS
Marriage and Family Counselor

"Mommy, what's the matter with Daddy?" Peter is only 5, but he knows something is not right. His parents haven't been talking to each other. He feels the tension and the coldness. He is afraid and confused.

If answers don't seem real, or answers don't make sense, then children let their imaginations run wild. Children will often invent wild explanations and form conclusions from partial information.

Often parents try to spare children the necessity of dealing with difficult circumstances. When there is a financial crisis, they try to resolve the problem without letting the child become aware of it. When a serious illness or surgery is necessary, parents often play it down as far as the child is concerned. If there is a death, they may prevent the child from going to the funeral.

It is hard to exclude children completely from these kinds of events. Children will have a partial awareness of the problem even if they do not understand what it is about. Children are sensitive to the smallest changes in the family.

Four-year-old Sandy went to bed angry at her mother, and in her hurt and anger, said to herself that she wished her mother would eat worms and die. A week later, her mother needed to go to the hospital for some tests. The parents decided not to worry the children, so they kept the reason for the hospital stay a secret. Sandy knew something was wrong because Mom and Dad seemed worried. After that, she overheard her father on the phone to her grandparents, discussing the coming hospitalization. Sandy was sure her mother was going to die, and furthermore, it was her fault. She had wished her Mom dead, and so Mom was now in the hospital. Extreme guilt and remorse followed. Lucky for her, she was told the truth, and a short time later, visited Mom to see she was really going to be all right.

It is better to tell the child the simple truth than it is to keep secrets. This may be difficult, yet children are much more capable of handling crises than we think. Children, when the truth and our feelings are shared honestly, are remarkable at coping. They often hold up better than their parents. They can be a source of strength to parents in times of crisis if given the chance.

"Quite a play partner," chortled East.

"I guess I was desperate," replied West.

West made the normal opening lead of the five of hearts. East won with the king and returned the suit. South won in dummy, led the queen of clubs and let it ride. West took his king.

Here is where West made the play that received East's approval. He decided there was no future in the heart suit and that the only way to defeat the contract would be to collect three quick spade tricks. So he promptly led his king of spades and continued with the deuce.

South looked long and hard in all directions, finally reached over and played dummy's queen. East took his ace and returned the suit. West made his jack and that was enough.

South really shouldn't have fallen for West's play. If West actually held the ace and king he would have under-led them to start with. On the other hand, there had to be some real merit to the play West made since it did succeed.

Mind-changing chemicals—help from without?

Creative drugs may clear or cloud mankind's future

EDITOR'S NOTE: Your mind a bit cloudy lately? Can't concentrate? Finding yourself uncreative? The time may come when you'll reach into your medicine cabinet for drugs that change such mental states and many others. Work on mind chemicals is going forward in many laboratories.

By RICHARD SALTUS
AP Science Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When the words weren't flowing, Balzac drank coffee — 50 cups a day. F. Scott Fitzgerald turned to the bottle, and Coleridge woke from an opium dream to write one of his finest poems.

Better thinking through chemistry is an old idea, but scientists may be on the edge of a new era with the prospect of using drugs to improve learning, memory, attention and perhaps even creativity.

Drugs that buoy a depressed person, dampen the drastic ups and downs of manic-depressive illness, calm anxiety and keep schizophrenics anchored in reality are routinely used. Like these mind-changing drugs, the new learning and memory substances — called neuropeptides — are further evidence of the intimate link between mental states and the rise and fall of chemicals in the brain.

Dr. Arnol Mandell, a leading investigator of psychotropic drugs, suggests that psychiatrists "are all trying to get the mind and the brain back together again. The mind ran off with the analysts and the brain ran off with the biological (researchers) and what I'm seeing now is everyone trying to refuse them."

Although experiments with animals have shown significant improvement through the drugs in learning a certain task and retaining it, Fink says human tests have not clearly shown that the drugs are helpful.

However, an experiment with 20 retarded patients reported last year showed that an injection of a neuropeptide fragment of the hormone ACTH increased their ability to pay attention to a visual activity.

ATCH is one of the chemical messengers produced by the pituitary gland that hangs at the base of the brain. Until recently, it was thought that ACTH and other pituitary hormones had only one function — to stimulate other glands to secrete their hormones. The discovery that they alter thinking and behavior as well was unexpected.

Tests in which a single dose of a peptide chain of ACTH molecules called ACTH 4-12 was given to elderly people showed some small but not very significant changes in memory, says Fink. New studies are underway using a more potent form of the drug.

The chemical road to that elusive state, creativity, is being followed more quietly and less formally. With their goals so hard to describe in scientific terms and their drugs so controversial, the seekers of imagination are leery of talking too much.

One of them is Dr. Alexander T. Shulgin, a physical chemist who lives outside San Francisco. Described by a colleague as a "gentleman scientist," Shulgin is a sort of free-lance drug designer for the government and pharmaceutical companies.

He has tinkered with drugs related to mescaline and other hallucinogens from the "wild 1960s," as he calls them, until their mind-distorting effects are nearly gone. What's left is a series of compounds said

Or will signal its downfall—Chacon

New law will set course for bilingual education

Valley educators received an update on current issues in bilingual education during a symposium at La Verne College.

The meeting was called in conjunction with an orientation session for Proyecto SABER (San Bernardino Area Bilingual Educational Resources), a program sponsored by La Verne College to train bilingual paraprofessionals for teaching accreditation.

Assemblyman Peter R. Chacon, D-San Diego, co-author of two bills affecting bilingual education, was on hand last week to explain the far-reaching affects of his AB 1329, a law that is causing much controversy in educational circles.

Chacon said the law, on the books for almost a year, "will either set the course for bilingual education in the nation or will signal its downfall."

He said that California has long been a model for education in the rest of the nation and that bilingual education would be no exception. According to Chacon, the state of Arizona has already used California's law to begin forming its policies on multi-language programs.

AB 1329 calls for assuring bilingual programs for elementary schools as well as establishing guidelines for the testing, licensing and credentialing of teachers for multi-language classrooms.

"It is the purpose of the bill to provide every child in the state a quality education, regardless of whether his primary language and culture are that of the majority community," Chacon said.

While he considers AB 1329 a definite victory for bilingual education, Chacon also outlined some problems facing implementation of the new law and multi-language programs.

"This new law took many people by surprise and only now is it beginning to be fully recognized. People are finally coming to understand 1329 and many don't like it," he said.

According to Chacon, several teacher's organizations have registered opposition at the law because they believe it will cost them their jobs. The assemblyman said that was an incorrect assumption.

"No teacher employed with 1329 monies can replace a teacher already employed by the district," he said. "That's specified in the bill.

"There are indications now that bilingual education is under attack and there will be serious problems in obtaining continued funding for programs like Proyecto SABER. It is going to necessitate strong support by those of you in bilingual education and those of you seeking to be involved," Chacon said.

Other speakers at the symposium included Gustavo Getner, consultant to the state Commission on Teacher Preparation and Licensing and Guillermo Lopez, director of bilingual education for the California State Department of Education.

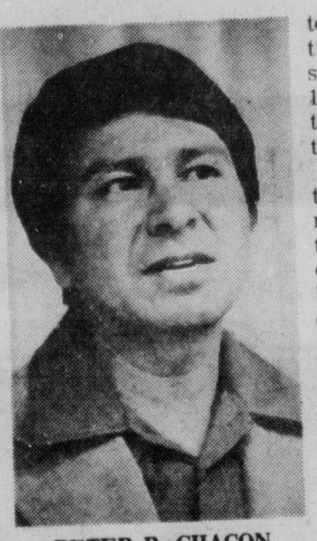
Lopez pointed out the importance of the achievement conditions of bilingual education.

"The law requires us to give achievement tests at the beginning and end of each year to determine progress made in the performance of each limited or non-English-speaking student. What you do in that classroom between adult and student is going to be critical in the next few years," Lopez told the audience. "I hope that when that report goes to Mr. Chacon's subcommittee for assessment that it will be a positive one."

Getner explained how the guidelines were established for licensing of bilingual educators.

"The credentialling process was not designed by some vague group in Sacramento deciding what was best for teachers. It began and will end with teachers. We held eight state hearings in which teachers were asked what teachers working with limited English-speaking students should know. We talked not only about the language proficiencies, but also of the knowledge of cultural differences. After these hearings, we adopted competencies teachers would have and that became our basis for licensing."

Teachers now seeking credentialing for bilingual programs must receive a certificate of competence from the state. Such certification is available from 32 institutions of higher education throughout the state, but many schools are not yet geared up to meet the requirements of the new law. Recognizing this lack of testing facilities, the commission also allows school districts with over 30,000 enrollment or counties to administer the test, provided it meets standards set up by the commission.



PETER R. CHACON

A direct application process is also available to teachers holding a credential, but that program is scheduled to expire Sept. 15. It is likely, however, that the date will be extended for a year.

In addition to the teaching credential, requirements for meeting the direct application include 24 semester units beyond the bachelor's degree, course work dealing with language, culture and education techniques, and proficiency in the second language.

Creative drugs—

to have various interesting effects. In some cases they enrich the flow of ideas.

Dr. Mandell, a longtime investigator of the biochemical nature of various mental states and disorders, described a test of a Shulgin drug done some years ago. The experiment involved college students who wrote compositions after taking a placebo (inactive pill), an amphetamine (stimulant) or a creativity drug.

"On the placebo they wrote two or three pages," said Mandell. "On the amphetamine they wrote eight or 10 pages, but it was boring and repetitive. On the Shulgin compound they wrote eight or 10 pages very rich in content."

Mandell suggests that there is a chemical system in the brain that dulls a person's reactions to signals that occur repeatedly, whether they are stimuli from outside or one's internal thoughts.

The drugs block that system, which Mandell believes is responsible for boredom and stale thinking, and makes things appear to glisten with freshness.

"You know very well that if you went into a problem that you knew like the back of your hand, you'd get bored with it; you look at it and there are no more things to think about it," he says.

"Then, if you were to come to it as though you'd never seen it before ... then new combinations start to emerge. That's what the Shulgin chemical does."

"I still don't know, frankly, if they all ought to be used just for research and then locked up," Mandell says. "There are dangers in the chemical world no less than in the atomic world."

Tinkering with the brain in this way might be dangerous in the long run, and Mandell is bothered by questions of who would get the drugs and who would administer them.

"Is lack of creativity a defect that you should treat, or are there just going to be some people who are creative and some who aren't?"

trict in the top half of the county pay charts to insure attracting quality teachers to the district.

—The fact that the district has now slipped from the 14th best payed teachers in the county to the 36th. There are 43 districts in the county.

Gale said that BUTA had originally filed a petition with the Educational Employment Relations Board to include school psychologists, nurses, student services directors and counselors in its bargaining unit, but dropped the request in a spirit of compromise and conciliation in contract negotiations.

Gale implied that the district did not bargain in good faith when "tentative agreement" was reached on a number of issues. At that time, said Gale, the district acted as though those agreements were completed instead of allowing the possibility they be brought back for further discusssion later on.

Gale said that following the winter recess, when no contract had been reached, teachers in the district began questioning both the BUTA leadership as well as the administration. He said the major disagreements in the settlement at that time were salary, fringe benefits, transfers and management rights.

"Our membership up to the middle of the year was pretty passive," said Gale. "Then they began to get concerned."

While Gale was not pleased with the findings of the fact finder, he did note, as in the report's minority section, "the fact finding process will have served its purpose . . . if the teachers learn . . . it is impossible to bargain for teachers services when during those negotiations the teachers themselves are giving their services away in the classroom."

Despite the district's arguments to the contrary, says Gale, BUTA continues its belief that money for the 6 per cent raise was there. He said the last minute offer of 4 per cent retroactive to May 1 was designed only to lend an atmosphere of fairness to the 4 per cent raise granted administrators.

For the teachers, said Gale, the big question remains why the district was unable to offer a more significant raise with an $800,000 increase in the budget and, more importantly, where did the money go?

The largest increase in Los Angeles County last year was the 10.3 per cent won by teachers in Monrovia, he said. The smallest was the 4 per cent raise for teachers in South Pasadena, Pasadena, San Marino and Palos Verdes. With an offer of 2 per cent, said Gale, why should Bonita be so different?

Lack of funds root of trouble

detrimental to the district because they are stated in other already existing flexible laws. He said that a contract should be inflexible between the two parties, but that the law is flexible. A change in the law, he reasoned, could force the district into a position where it was breaking the law if such items outside the scope of the Rodda Act were included in the contract.

Still Johnson agrees with teachers that the big item in the dispute was money. He admits that the $800,000 increase in the district's 1976-77 budget was a significant increase over 1975-76, but he points to the report of the fact finder when it comes time to determine where that money was spent. The fact finder's report says that of that 8 per cent budget increase, 3.35 per cent went to step and column adjustments in the pay scale for employes. Another .39 per cent went to mandatory increases in state retirement costs; 1.5 per cent went to fringe benefit increases and 2 per cent went to the general increase in pay offered the teachers.

Johnson says that administrative and confidential employes of the district did accept a 2 per cent increase last year.

"My whole theory has been that if we had had the money we would have had the contract," said Johnson. "We saw many districts settling around us with contracts we would have gladly accepted had we had the money to do so. I think the teachers were trying to broaden the scope of the contract to make up for the small pay increase.

Johnson said he concurs with the fact finding report which says a 6 per cent pay increase would have been a logical offer on the part of the district. He says the district would have made such an offer had the increased funds been available.

Johnson feels the teachers based their case on an estimated $1 million the district had projected for its budget increase last year. That projected figure, however, came up short by $200,000 when the district did not receive an anticipated increase in its student load and through an adjustment in its average daily attendance figures caused by a change in ADA law.

U.S.-Israeli talks

JERUSALEM (AP) — President Carter and Prime Minister Menahem Begin have an "excellent" chance of holding successful talks in Washington later this month, Sen. Jacob K. Javits said today.

The Republican senator from New York said Begin was "deeply sincere about the willingness to go to Geneva ... and to negotiate without preconditions."

He was referring to the possibility of reconvening the Geneva peace conference on the Middle East, in recess since 1973.

The district administration and the Bonita Unified Teachers Association first sat down at the bargaining table last August to begin negotiating. By Dec. 3, the negotiations had stalled to such a point that an impasse was declared and mediation was requested from the state. The state mediator met with the two groups through Christmas and into the new year and, failing again to reach an agreement, notified the state of the district's need for a fact finding report.

Fact finding is a process by which the state Educational Employment Relations Board supplies to the parties involved persons who will prepare a report stating objectively the facts surrounding any issue in dispute. In Bonita's case, a 3-person panel was used with one member named by the district, one by the teachers and a third — the fact finder — taken from a 3-name list from which both the district and teachers were allowed to remove one name.

The fact finding process did not begin until April and was not completed until May. The fact finder's final report presented a somewhat pro-district position, but — in the end — failed to clear up little in the dispute.

On June 30, the district made one final offer to the teachers of a 6 per cent pay hike retroactive to May 1. Teachers could have accepted that increase, which would have carried over into the next fiscal year, at that time. As of July 1, however, no contractual obligations from the previous year could be negotiated.

The teachers rejected the last minute June 30 offer.

The following two stories are presented in an attempt to explain both the administration and the teacher point of view.

Budget hearing is slated

Pomona City Council will hold a public hearing Monday night to consider adoption of a tentative $22 million budget.

The council will also consider allocation of federal funds to community agencies.

Other agenda items for the 8 p.m. meeting include a proposed 6.5 per cent salary increase for Pomona policemen under the provisions of a two-year contract signed last year.

Safety course offered

CLAREMONT RED CROSS will offer a standard first aid and personal safety course beginning Monday from 7 to 10 p.m. at the chapter house, 2065 N. Indian Hill Blvd.

The class will be held each Monday and Wednesday evening through July 27.

Additional information may be obtained by phoning 624-0074. The instructor will be Gary Kraus.

Valley Indians smarter than we thought

By CONRAD CASLER
PB Staff Writer

Pomona-Walnut prehistoric Indians are emerging as much more sophisticated than scientists believed as little as 20 years ago.

"They've had a pretty bad press," said Dr. Tom Blackburn, Cal Poly Pomona acheologist-anthropologist, while conducting a dig on Little Red Hill in Cucamonga.

Blackburn said probably 4,000 items would be catalogued by the time the site was abandoned and spanking new 20th Century homes obliterate the site forever.

Estimates of the ages of the items collected range from 2,000 to 3,000 years. Catalogued and stored at Cal Poly now are scores of manos and metates — grinding stones used by Indians for grain processing, projectile points for both spears and arrows, stone knives, a few ornaments and discoidals — disc-shaped objects used either ritualistically or possibly as gaming devices, Blackburn said.

Up until recent times, local Indians were thought of as rather backward, mainly because they neither practiced agriculture nor pottery making.

But, Blackburn said, recent analysis of their life style indicates their civilization was highly sophisticated. Local Indians were named Gabrielinos by the Spanish who settled Mission San Gabriel but their ancestry has not yet been firmly established.

It is theorized, but not firmly established, that the local Indians originated inland far northeast of here and gradually moved toward the coast, squeezing the Chumash tribes north along the coast and Chumash cousins south toward San Diego.

Valuable finds on both Big and Little Red Hills in Cucamonga lent credence to the tribe's sophistication. Mostly stone artifacts were found but some animal bone, firepit charcoal and parched seed was uncovered.

Tools indicate the Indians were good hunters. They also had almost 200 varieties of grain which grew naturally and abundantly to harvest even though it was not cultivated.

Grain was sometimes parched and eaten or ground and processed into a porridge-like treat and sometimes into a flour-like substance baked into unleavened cakes. Acorns also were in abundance but not used widely until the process of leaching out tannic acid was discovered, Blackburn said.

Obsidian arrow and spearheads found so far indicate this material probably came from the Coso Range of mountains in Owens Valley, he said.

It's official: Cunningham takes over

WATSON WINS

Tom Watson grins as he holds up the British Open Golf Championship trophy, after he won the title by shooting a 65. His mark was just one stroke better than Jack Nicklaus'.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gary Cunningham, who turned down a chance two years ago to succeed the legendary John Wooden as UCLA basketball coach, was named to the position Saturday, replacing Gene Bartow.

UCLA Athletic Director J.D. Morgan said Cunningham "is a great teacher and his experience and accomplishments in the UCLA basketball program will be of great value as he assumes the Bruins' head coaching position."

Terms and length of the contract were not disclosed.

Cunningham, 37, was considered a prime choice to succeed Wooden when the latter retired following the 1974-75 season. Morgan said Cunnigham would have been his first choice when Wooden stepped down but "Gary took himself out of the picture before John retired, saying he wanted to go into administration."

Cunningham played at UCLA from 1960-62 and was an assistant coach under Wooden from 1965 to 1975 but left coaching when Wooden retired. He has served as executive director of the UCLA Alumni Association since that time.

"I think sometimes a person has to get away from what he's doing to know what he really enjoys," said Cunningham. "When this opportunity came I felt it was something I wanted very much.

"I am really elated," he added. "When Mr. Morgan offered me the job I immediately said yes. I made the decision to go into administrative work and not be a candidate to succeed coach Wooden long before he retired. But things change."

Cunningham served four years as Wooden's top varsity assistant after six years as an assistant and head coach of UCLA freshman teams.

Bartow resigned as UCLA's head coach last month to become athletic director and head basketball coach at The University of Alabama-Birmingham.

Bartow's two UCLA teams recorded a 52-9 record and won a pair of Pacific-8 Conference championships.

But he came under heavy criticism among UCLA alumni after not winning a national championship, an accomplishment that had become nearly an annual affair by the Bruins. UCLA won 10 national titles in Wooden's final 12 years on the Westwood campus.

As a head coach Cunningham will enter his first full season with a 1-0 varsity record. He coached the Bruins to a 98-67 victory over UC Santa Barbara during the 1972-73 season when Wooden was hospitalized with a heart condition.

As freshman coach, Cunningham's teams were 101-15. He coached three unbeaten teams, the 1965-66 team led by Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, the 1967-68 squad led by Curtis Rowe and the 1970-71 club led by Bill Walton and Jamaal Wilkes.

"I'm looking forward to the coming year and working with the nucleus of returning players, along with the newcomers," said Cunningham. "We have great fans and UCLA, a great following and a tradition that I hope I can perpetuate."

"I'm so pleased Gary made the career decision to become UCLA's head coach," said Morgan. "He was an outstanding player and an outstanding assistant coach.

"I talked to Gary for many months a few years back before coach Wooden retired," continued Morgan. "I had to be thinking about John's leaving. I told Gary then I was prepared to have him as a top candidate. But he took himself out of the picture, saying he wanted to go into administration.

"He would have been the top candidate two years ago."

But Cunningham said no, so Bartow was offered the job and left Illinois to accept it. In his first game as the Bruins' head coach, the team was trounced by Indiana, a team that was to go unbeaten in 1975-76 and win the national championship.

Bartow was under fire from then on.

Morgan said he "interviewed a lot of really top-flight men" as possible successors to Bartow. He would not comment when asked if anyone other than Cunningham was offered the position.

Denny Crum, another former UCLA player and assistant coach who has been the head coach at Louisville since the 1971-72 season, said last week he was offered the position, but turned it down.

Earlier, Dean Smith of North Carolina, the 1976 U.S. Olympic coach, asked that he not be considered for the UCLA post.

As a UCLA player, Cunningham collected 919 points and ranked 16th on the school's all-time scoring list. He was a first-team all-conference selection as a junior and a second-team pick a year later.

GARY CUNNINGHAM

Following graduation from UCLA he became head basketball coach at American High School in Manila from 1962-64, where his teams won league and American tournament championships the last year.

In the summers of 1972 and 1974, Cunningham spent time in Spain, working with the Spanish Basketball Federation and aiding in Spain's national program.

"When I left coaching two years ago I was fortunate to get a good job, one I enjoyed very much," said Cunningham. "But I've really missed basketball. I'm glad to be able to return to the game I love."

Nicklaus' best not enough

TURNBERRY, Scotland (AP) — Tom Watson, the man who would be king of golf, again beat Jack Nicklaus, who now holds that position, and won the British Open Saturday in one of the greatest duels the game has ever seen.

"I gave him my best shot," said Nicklaus, generally considered the finest player the game has ever known. Jack, also beaten by Watson in the Masters, then laughed ruefully.

"I'm tired of giving him my best shot and it not being good enough."

It wasn't.

He played the last two rounds in the British Open 65-66 and it wasn't good enough to beat Watson, who played them 65-65.

"Yoc couldn't have done much better Jack," someone suggested.

"Yes, I could," he said. "Two shots. That's how much better I needed to be."

Watson, who was paired with Nicklaus in the last 36 holes, didn't lead until the 17th of the final round. He trailed by three at the end of the first four holes of the last round.

"Every time it looked like I was going to get a little ways ahead, Tom kept coming back," Nicklaus said. "He just kept on coming at me.

"I think he played a little better than I did both days. He did not allow himself to make any mistakes. That was the difference."

The difference was one stroke. But it was a very big stroke; very, very big.

It left Watson as the outstanding player in the game this year. And it left Nicklaus as a beaten challenger, beaten after he'd had the lead in both the Masters and the British Open, two of the Big Four events he prizes so dearly.

Watson, now offering the greatest challenge ever to Nicklaus' long-time role as the world's premier performer, acquired his second British Open title and his second major tournament victory of the year with a record 268 total.

That's 12 below par on Turnberry's Ailsa course, stretching 6,875 yards by the Irish Sea and and an incredible eight strokes better than the 276 that ranked as the best previous total in the 106-year history of golf's oldest tournament.

Nicklaus, now a six-time British Open runnerup, went down fighting. He holed an across-the-green birdie putt of 60 feet on the final hole. But it wasn't good enough.

Watson had thrown his approach to within 2½ feet. He boldly rammed it home for a one-stroke decision. It was his third consecutive victory and sixth of the season.

Nicklaus, who played the last two rounds head-to-head with Watson, didn't make a bogey in his round of 66. He finished perhaps the greatest confrontation the game has ever seen with a 269 total.

It was simply magnificent.

For 36 holes, for two rounds in rain and wind, storm and sunshine, Nicklaus, the finest player the world has seen, and Watson, the man who would supplant him, fought each other with some of the finest golf ever played.

They'd gone through the first two rounds with matching scores of 68 and 70. Playing in the same two-some in Friday's storm-interrupted round, they matched 65s—until this year the tournament record score.

And then Saturday they kept up a pace that seemed impossible. Watson played his last 36 holes in 130, Nicklaus in 131— unbelievable scores.

In the end, Watson's little putt on the 18th decided it.

It was an appropriate finish to an incredible struggle that may have signaled a turning point in the game.

U.S. open champion Hubert Green was the only other man in subpar figures for four rounds. He finished with a 67 and a 279 total, 10 shots back of Watson.

Perry tops Halos, 7-2

ARLINGTON (AP) — Bump Wills and Mike Hargrove each delivered two-run singles in a five-run second inning Saturday night as the Texas Rangers followed the eight-hit pitching of Gaylord Perry to a 7-2 victory over the California Angels.

California starter Wayne Simpson, 3-6, lasted only 11-3 innings as Texas reached him for six runs on five hits.

The 39-year-old Perry survived a shaky second inning to post his eighth victory against seven losses. He struck out eight and walked two.

Perry, who had allowed only one run in his last 26 innings, was touched for five singles in a two-run second-inning outburst by the Angels. But he struck out Tony Solaita and forced Bobby Bonds to ground out with the bases loaded to get out of the jam.

It was the fourth consecutive victory for the Rangers under new manager Billy Hunter, tying a season high. Texas won its first four games of the year.

Perry settled down to retire nine straight batters in the middle innings after he had permitted six hits in the first four innings.

Texas grabbed a 1-0 lead in the first with the benefit of only one hit. Bert Campaneris walked, went to third on Claudell Washington's single, and scored on a double play grounder.

The Rangers sent 10 batters to the plate in the five-run second inning.

Kickers host Germans today

A first for Valley youth soccer will occur today at 3 p.m. when the Diamond Bar Kickers participate as the host team in an international match with Germany's Hertha 03 Zehlendorf Soccer Club at Chaparral Intermediate School in Diamond Bar.

The game will be the highlight of the West Germans' stay in the United States, which has been made possible through several donations and the generosity of the Kicker families.

After the soccer match, both teams will conclude their week's activities with a picnic.

Mendoza's first RBI wins game for Pirates in 12th

Mario Mendoza started the second half of the Pittsburgh Pirates season by doing something he hadn't done in the first half—driving in a run.

The light-hitting Mendoza broke a 12th-inning tie with an RBI single to give the Pittsburgh Pirates a 9-8 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies Saturday.

Mendoza, who has has been to bat only 22 times this season, bounced his two-out single up the middle off loser Gene Garber, 4-5, to score Jim Fregosi, who walked and took third on Ed Ott's double.

The Pirates, who trailed 6-2 at one point, took an 8-6 lead with a three-run spurt in the eighth inning that was highlighted by Willie Stargell's two-run pinch-single.

The Phils sent the game into extra innings with two runs in the ninth, including a game-tying sacrifice fly by Dave Johnson, who also had a three-run double and a solo homer.

In other day games in the National League, Keith Hernandez smashed three hits and scored two runs and Tony Scott knocked in two runs in the first inning to lead the St. Louis Cardinals to 4-3 victory over the Chicago Cubs in a nationally televised game.

Gary Alexander's pinch-hit, ground rule double scored pinch-runner Rob Andrews in the 11th inning to give the San Francisco Giants a 5-4 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

In the American League, Charlie Moore hit a solo home run and scored the winning run in the eighth on Steve Dillard's error as the Milwaukee Brewers edged the Red Sox 3-2, snapping a four-game losing streak.

The New York Mets broke a nine-game losing streak on Lenny Randle's two-run homer in the 17th inning. Randle's blast off Will McEnaney, 2-3, came on a 1-1 pitch with two outs in the inning and winner Paul Siebert, 1-0, on first.

Cleveland defeated Toronto 3-2 when pinch-hitter Andre Thornton slammed a two-out, two-run homer in the ninth inning off Jerry Garvin, 7-8. Garvin had carried a six-hitter into the ninth.

Wayne Garland, 6-9, got the victory as he scattered 11 hits, including Doug Rader's sixth homer of the year.

Baltimore rallied for three runs in the eighth to edge New York 6-5 and move within a game of the first-place Yankees. Steve Skaggs' single capped the rally but the big play was Willie Randolph's error on a potential double play grounder.

Graig Nettles and Thurman Munson homered for New York. Andres Mora drove in three runs for Baltimore.

Eric Soderholm's two-run homer helped the White Sox to their ninth straight triumph, a 5-2 decision that was Detroit's sixth consecutive setback.

Jorge Orta's double in the ninth inning provided Chicago with a pair of insurance runs and Lerrin LaGrow made the lead stand up with 2 2/3 innings of sparkling relief. LaGrow earned his 14th save.

Johnny Bench's two-run homer, his 20th of the season, helped Tom Seaver to his ninth win in 14 decisions as the Reds topped Houston 3-1. Seaver outpitched Houston ace Joaquin Andujar, also 9-5. Both men threw seven-hitters.

Double trouble for Dodgers

By DON BRADLEY
PB Staff Writer

LOS ANGELES — The Dodgers ran into double trouble Saturday night.

First there was a great pitching performance by San Diego pitcher Dave Freisleben. Then there was a rash of complaints lodged by the Padres that Dodger starter Don Sutton was doing something to the baseball.

Freisleben (2-5), a stocky righthander who has been up and down like a yo-yo between San Diego and the Padres' Hawaii farm team in the Pacific Coast League, beat the Dodgers on two hits in 10 innings, 2-1.

John Hale's first home run in two years gave the Angelenos their only run in the eighth inning. Johnny Oates' third-inning single was the other hit.

Freisleben struck out six and walked one. He had retired 13 Dodgers in a row when Hale hit his roundtripper. It seems impossible that he carried a horrendous 7.50 earned run average into the game.

What was different Saturday night?

"I got into a couple of games in relief last week and I think that did the trick," he explained. "I'd been struggling all year and most of last year . . . even at Hawaii.

"But I got my weight down and last week in those two games in relief I got my rhythm back."

New Padres manager Alvin Dark is the one that ordered Freisleben, who stands 5-11, to lose poundage.

"I was up to 222," Freisleben admitted. "But I've lost 17 pounds. I'm down to 205 now. I felt great tonight. I was still strong at the end and could have gone three or four more innings."

Freisleben came out for a pinch-hitter in the 10th. Meanwhile, Charlie Hough had taken over for Sutton. Hough (4-7) retired the first two hitters then walked George Hendrick.

Hendrick stole second, the third steal off Oates, and scored easily on rookie Bill Almon's double.

The only thing missing for Freisleben was credit for a complete game. The Padres have had only one in 87 games to date.

Sutton pitched well and started even more brilliantly. The Dodger ace struck out 12 to tie his career high. He fanned six in the first three innings and 10 in the first five.

Dark wouldn't say what he was protesting about.

But Lasorda, who twice rushed out of the dugout to discuss things with Runge and do a little protesting of his own, was not above offering his opinion so loud it might have been heard over in the Padre clubhouse.

"I'm just sick and tired of the bleeping bleep of Sutton having to throw the ball in for inspections all the time," he bleeped. "Why the bleep didn't they inspect the bleeping ball (Dave) Winfield hit out."

Winfield's 19th homer, leading off the fourth inning, was the Padres' only run through nine innings. Sutton walked only two and gave up just five hits through nine innings.

"These guys are going to get me a Black and Decker commercial," joked Sutton. "I couldn't be happier. They keep saying I'm scuffing up the ball."

The loss, before 39,102, cut the Dodger lead over the Cincinnati Reds to 8½ games.

Are you worried, Sutton was asked.

"I'll be worried when we're 1½ behind with only one to play," he grinned.

DODGER DATA — The realigned Dodger pitching for today's doubleheader (1 p.m.) has veteran Al Downing (0-1) making his first start of the season in the first game opposed by John D'Acquisto (1-1). Rick Rhoden (10-4) and Dave Wehrmeister (1-2) pitch in the nightcap.

Downing will probably be battling for a spot on the roster. Either Downing or pinch hitter Boog Powell is expected to be cut when Lee Lacy comes off the disabled list.

Lacy may not be back until after the All-Star Game. He was examined Saturday and the pulled ligament in his right thumb is still sore enough to hamper his throwing. Officially, Lacy is on a day-to-day basis.

The Dodgers were without three of their regulars Saturday night. Catcher Steve Yeager did not start because of a sore left shoulder. Davey Lopes, who was hit on the back of his left hand in batting practice Wednesday night, is also on a day-to-day basis. Likewise Reggie Smith (right knee).

Yeager has a 13-game hitting streak going (22-for-51 at .431) and has raised his average to .293. He had the best quote after Friday night's win in which he threw a football block into Padre catcher Gene Tenace while scoring.

"I heard Chuck Knox (Rams coach) was in the stands," quipped Yeager, "so I thought I'd show him how I handle fourth and inches."

What a Summer notches victory

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — What A Summer led most of the way in scoring a two-length victory in the $43,300 Silver Spoon Handicap at Hollywood Park Saturday.

What A Summer, ridden by Bill Shoemaker and carrying 122 pounds, covered 6½ furlongs in 1:15 and paid $8.20, $4.20 and $3. Favored Regal Rumor finished second and returned $3.60 and $2.60. Sing Back paid $3.60 to show.

What A Summer, a 4-year-old grey filly owned by Mrs. Bertram R. Firestone, earned $25,300.

Shoemaker was aboard two other winners Saturday. He piloted Innuendo to victory in the second race and Bobs Maggie to first place in the ninth race.

Honorary captains named

NEW YORK (AP) — Joe DiMaggio and Willie Mays, two of baseball's all-time top centerfielders, will serve as honorary captains for the 48th All-Star Game at Yankee Stadium July 19, Baseball Commissoner Bowie Kuhn announced Saturday.

As honorary captains they will accompany the All-Star managers to the pre-game conference at home plate and will remain in uniform throughout the game.

DiMaggio played in 11 AllStar games and Mays appeared in 24.

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Mets' shortstop Bud Harrelson suffered a small fracture of the third metacarpul bone on his right hand Friday night when he dove back to first in the seventh inning of the Mets game with the Montreal Expos.

The hand will be placed in a cast, but he will remain on the active roster and be available for pinch-running duties, the club announced.

Clines out of action

CHICAGO (AP) — Outfielder Gene Clines of the Chicago Cubs Saturday was placed on the 15-day disabled list because of a severely bruised left ankle suffered while sliding home in the eighth inning of Friday's 7-6 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

At the same time, the Cubs reactivated outfielder Jose Cardenal who had been on the disabled list because of a severely bruised left thumb.

Pooley pulls into tie

COAL VALLEY, Ill. (AP) — Don Pooley sank a 35-foot birdie putt to pull into a tie with Victor Regalado after three rounds in the $125,000 Quad Cities Open Golf Tournament Saturday.

Regalado, one of the halfway leaders, and Pooley went to 13 under par over the 6,620-yard, par-71 Oakwood Country Club course. Four players were one stroke back at 201 and 11 others were within five shots of the leaders.

Drifter still ahead

HONOLULU (AP) — Merlin was closing rapidly on Drifter Saturday in a stretch duel between ultra-light displacement boats in the Transpacific Yacht Race.

Drifter, a 70-foot sloop skippered by Mike Hillman of Bakersfield, Calif., has led from the start of the 2,225-mile race from Los Angeles to Honolulu, but Merlin had pulled within eight miles of the leader by daybreak. Merlin, a 67-foot sloop, is owned and sailed by Bill Lee of Santa Cruz, Calif.

Both yachts were expected to cross the Diamond Head finish line Sunday, with the winner smashing the record time. The record is nine days, nine hours, six minutes and 48 seconds, set in 1971.

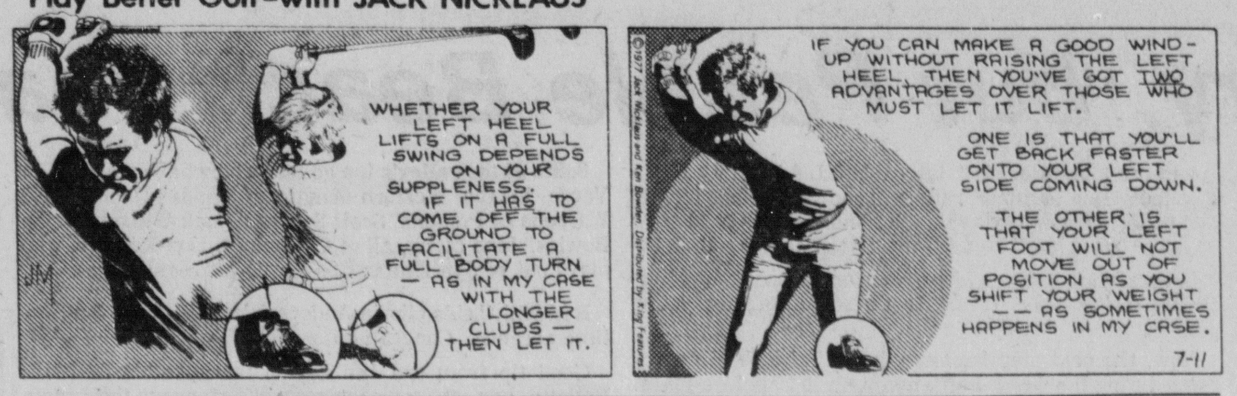
Play Better Golf-with JACK NICKLAUS



Layoff tough on Ashe

MIAMI (AP) — Tennis star Arthur Ashe, who has been hobbled by a foot injury most of the year, says he's finding the comback road isn't easy.

At Wimbledon, Ashe learned that memory is pretty short. Ashe, who won the men's singles title in 1975, was attending as a spectator and headed toward the players' box to watch one of the top matches.

"I couldn't get in there," recalled Ashe of Miami. "This guy says, 'Where's your player's badge? I told him, 'I'm a player but I'm not a player.

"What can you say? Rules are rules. Fortunately, a guy next to him knew who I was. That was the irony of the two weeks."

Ashe underwent surgery in February on a bone spur in his foot. He has been working with weights and on an exercise cycle to get him ready to return to play, and plans to do so in two weeks at a Washington, D.C., tournament.

He played an exhibition match with Brian Gottfried Friday night in Fort Lauderdale. It was Ashe's first competitive tennis since the Australian Open in January. Ashe lost 6-3, 6-4.

"You're at the mercy of the recovery of the injury," Ashe said. "I may not play again if it doesn't completely heal. But it is healing, and I expect to play three or four more years. As far as the operation goes, I had no choice."

"When you don't play for six months, the timing goes," Gottfried said. " You usually hit with somebody not quite as hard. He was hitting better at the end."

Ashe said the layoff may have been a blessing in disguise for himself and Jeanne Marie Moutoussamy, his bride of five months. "You get to know your wife real well when you're with her 24 hours a day for that long," he said.

Reynolds blasts Rosenbloom

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The court feuding by dissident players over the proposed collective bargaining contract between National Football League clubs and players will continue Monday.

U.S. District Judge Earl R. Larson heard more testimony Saturday from Jack Reynolds, former Los Angeles linebacker who now is without a contract and isn't likely to get back into the Rams fold after his stinging criticism of owner Carroll Rosenbloom.

Sixteen players, who charge the pact tentatively approved by Larson does not safeguard their interests, seek to halt the agreement worked out several months ago between the clubs and the National Football League Players Association.

Reynolds testified he had heard Rosenbloom say he would "cut the throat of anyone who touched his free agents" and that Rosenbloom aimed his remarks particularly at the Kansas City Chiefs.

The 29-year-old defenseman said that's when the Chiefs lost interest in dickering with Reynolds.

However, Larson directed the quote attributed to Rosenbloom be stricken from the record as not pertinent to the testimony at that point in the hearing.

Reynolds testified that in happier times with the Rams, he had a verbal agreement with Rosenbloom for a five-year contract at $120,000 a year, plus $100,000 in bonus money.

However, he added, when it came time for lawyers to put it down in writing, the Rams were "deleting things all over" and Rosenbloom told Reynolds it was a "whole new deal" now that the collective bargaining agreement was approved by NFL clubs and NFLPA.

"The Rams said there was no need to talk any more" Reynolds said, after he turned down the revised verbal agreement.

Another witness Saturday was Kermit Alexander, former NFLPA president and onetime defensive back with the San Francisco 49ers and Rams.

Alexander, called to the stand by chief attorney for the NFLPA Edward Glennon testified in favor of the collective bargaining agreement.

"I was more interested in freedom of movement than the money aspect, of it," said Alexander, who now is a players' agent.

Ed Garvey, executive director of the NFLPA, is expected to testify Monday. Apparently the hearing will conclude Monday or Tuesday, attorneys predicted.

Bob Unser wins pole

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Once he was able to attain full power, Bobby Unser had little trouble winning the pole position Saturday for Sunday's 200 mile U.S. Auto Club stock car race.

Unser from Albuquerque, N.M., was bothered during practice by a bad throttle cable, which cut the power in 1977 Chevrolet Camero by one-third.

"We found that the throttle cable was slipping," he said. "That meant the throttle was only opening two-thirds of the way. But we fixed it just before we went out to qualify, and everything went fine."

Unser drove his car around the one-mile Wisconsin State Fair Park oval in just 33.16 seconds for a speed of 108.565 miles per hour. Ramo Stott of Keokuk, Iowa, driving a 1977 Plymouth Volare, was second at 33.53 seconds and 107.367 m.p.h.

Ron Hutcherson, also of Keokuk, qualified his Volare at 33.55, good for third place. Dave Watson of Milton, Wis., was just as quick but because Hutcherson had qualified his car first, Watson had to settle for the No. 4 spot.

Grambling plays in N.Y.

NEW YORK (AP) — Grambling and Morgan State, predominantly black colleges, will meet in a football game at Yankee Stadium Sept. 17, it was announced Wednesday. It was not yet determined whether the game will be played during the day or at night.

USC coach featured

LOS ANGELES — USC Head Football Coach John Robinson will be a guest speaker at the seventh annual sports medicine symposium to be held at Orthopaedic Hospital, Friday, July 22, and Saturday, July 23.

Robinson, who led the Trojans to a national championship in the 1977 Rose Bowl during his first year as head coach, is one of 16 speakers who will talk about various aspects of sports medicine at the meeting to be attended by over 250 southern California coaches, trainers and school nurses.

The special program is sponsored annually by the hospital to help coaching personnel who work with young athletes learn how to recognize and handle injuries that occur on the playing field and to discuss conditioning and training methods that can prevent injuries. The symposium is co-chaired by J. Harold LaBriola, M.D., and Sonny P. Cobble, M.D., co-directors of a sports injury clinic held weekly at the non-profit specialty hospital.

The symposium, which consists of lectures, slides, films and demonstrations, is presented primarily by physicians who specialize in treating sports-related injuries. Speakers will cover a wide range of topics from first aid on the football field to the nutritional requirements of young athletes.

The symposium is scheduled for all day Friday, July 22, and half a day on Saturday, July 23.

It will be held in the Andrew Norman Hall at Orthopaedic Hospital, 2400 S. Flower St., Los Angeles.

Registration is $5 and reservations are required in advance. Optional graduate credit will be available from McPherson College.

The symposium is open to anyone who wishes to attend. Additional information regarding reservations may be obtained by calling Orthopaedic Hospital, (213) 747-4481, Ext. 504.

Tee to Cup

Sure, it's dry, but Pebble Beach ready for PGA

BY PHIL ROCHE
PB Staff Writer

Jack Nicklaus and the rest of the players in the 1977 PGA Championship 8-14 will have to do some revising in their charting of Pebble Beach.

The course will play fast, according to Don Padgett, president of the PGA.

"As good as these tees and greens are," says Padgett, "I'm predicting the score that wins will be lower than 286."

Nicklaus won the 1972 Open here with a score of 290, 2 over par, but Padgett thinks the faster fairways will produce a lower total.

Because of the drought, the report from Padgett is that some of the Pebble Beach fairways are showing brown spots. There has been concern that the course would be unfit for PGA play because of the dry conditions and water rationing on the Monterey Peninsula.

"Pebble Beach is a particularly sturdy course," says Padgett, " a challenging course that is always a thrill to play."

Weather doesn't make much difference, according to Padgett. "A championship course and a championship field go together successfully under any circumstances."

Tickets for the PGA event are available by writing the PGA Office, P.O. Box 1977, Pebble Beach. The Bing Crosby Youth Fund and other local charities will share in the profits from the Championship.

How many golfers can take a nap, a shower, and change clothes before a playoff? Scott Bentley had this refreshing pause last Monday in the fourth Confidence Western Amateur tour event at Cottonwood, and it helped him survive a tense, 4-hole, 3-way playoff for the title.

Bentley, 19, lives only 10 minutes from Cottonwood and attends nearby Grossmont College, which he helped to the state JC golf title. After shooting a 33-39 — 72, 1 under par, he went home for a rest and returned to win the playoff.

The Amateur Tour comes to Via Verde C.C. Monday, and a host of area golfers will be "right at home" since MSAC and other schools in the valley play their home matches there.

To no one's surprise, Shelby Myers, the annual champ at Marshall Canyon, added another title to her long list recently. She won the 1977 Marshall Canyon Woman's championship, and Nickie Taylor finished second.

Other winners and runnersup were: A flight, Neva Tassio, Faye Kulp and Lorraine Basinski; B flight, Gioia Shaw, Louise Putnam and Emily Miller; C flight, Elaine Ousterhout, Martha Colletti, Norma Wells and Dolores Leary.

Publicity director is Cathryn Naftel.

A number of valley golfers will be playing in the 78th Southern California Golf Association championship which begins with qualifying rounds Monday and Tuesday, July 18-19.

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Six hundred young golfers from 31 nations are expected to compete in the 1977 Junior World Golf Championships scheduled for July 19-22.

A spokesman said Tuesday that qualifying throughout the United States indicates "records may be set this year for quality as well as quantity."

I haven't mentioned it lately, but L.A. County has a genuinely fine summer rate program for youngsters 17 and under. During the week, the 18-hole rate is $1.50 after 12 noon. The kids, I'm told, must stop at the end of 18.

Congratulations then are in order to county golf officials for at least trying to do something for young golfers.

Now, the next step is close, thoughtful look at county rates during the week. I still maintain $5.25 before 4 p.m. and $2.75 after 4 is out of line. A more realistic approach is $4.50 and $2.25.

I have no quarrel with the $6.25 on weekends because all the courses in the area up their Saturday and Sunday rates, most as much as $8.

Best deal in the valley if you'd like your youngster to learn golf is at El Prado golf course every Saturday at 1 p.m., and the balls and instruction are free.

Bob Bickford and his crew are doing a marvelous job there. Incidentally, Chino Creek, which I had the pleasure of playing Thursday, is in excellent shape. Everything about it is beautiful. Greens fees during the week? $4. Yep, that's it.

A record field of 211 players, made up of 130 pros and 81 amateurs, has filed entry for the 25th U.S. Women's Open Championship. The tournament will be played July 21-24 at Hazeltine National, Chaska, Minn.

The USGA has granted special exemption to Miss Patty Berg, who won the first Women's Open in 1946.

Some of the valley's top golfers who will be playing Via Verde in the Western Amateur Monday include Ed Warpeha of Pomona, Scott Sullivan, Jack Witham, Brian Bowles, John Mack, all of Claremont. Don Kramer, who plays out of San Dimas Canyon, is also a standout.

The Red Hill pro suggests golfers think of themselves as swinging in a barrel. "Try to avoid letting your body hit the sides of the barrel," he says. Thanks Jim.

Joe DiMaggio will return to the site of his only major golf victory, and so will the American Airlines Golf Classic.

The 54-hole, $30,000 tournament will be conducted Jan. 27-29, 1978, over the Palm Course near Scottsdale, Ariz.

DiMag, who has had several close finishes in the nine times he has been paired with footballer Otto Graham, finally won it last January with the old Cleveland Browns quarterback Graham again as his partner.

Earlier in the tourney, Joltin Joe was conked on the head by Yogi Berra, but Yogi wasn't sorry.

"Joe wasn't doin' nothin' until I conked him," said Berra. "Then he woke up and started playin."

Winners in the President's Cup event at San Dimas Canyon are: President's flight, Jim Erskine; vice president, Hank Bryant; secretary, Jessie Hollifield; treasurer, Richard Farina; custodian, Bill Becker.

The club's July best ball event will be held Saturday.

Music keeps family in harmony

GIBSONBURG, Ohio (AP) — Joanne and Dean Niswander met in college music classes and have sung and played their way through 26 years of marriage, and now the Niswander family has been named "Amateur Music Family of the Year."

They were chosen for the seventh annual award made by the American Music Conference, an organization dedicated to fostering music participation through a national search for a family that is representative of the nation's 39 million amateur musicians.

"They are truly representative of the thousands of families in our country who find that music is a tie to hold the family together and a means of giving satisfaction to themselves and to others," says Les Propp, president of AMC.

"Music is probably the one thing that preserved our sanity through raising a family of six children, all approximately two years apart in age," says Mrs. Niswander, who met her husband in music classes at Bluffton College, Bluffton, Ohio.

Among them, including the parents, the family plays 11 instruments: piano, trumpet, organ, flute, violin, viola, guitar, French horn, alto horn, cello and bassoon.

Their commitment to music is so great, admits Niswander, that he went on stage in his role of Nanki-Poo for a community production of "The Mikado" the night their oldest son was born.

Although the Niswanders live in Gibsonburg in the Toledo area now, much of their life was spent in Okemos, Mich., where they performed extensively for church, school, community organizations and clubs.

"Music was so much a part of our life that it was inevitable that the children grew up with music in and around them," says Mrs. Niswander, "and it's hard to tell how much is innate talent and how much environment.

"They each have gained much personal satisfaction and reward during their at-home years in school and church music groups," she says. "We have tried to make music a thing of enjoyment for them — encouraging and undergirding their efforts, but not pressuring them to make it a vocation. We feel that music can enrich whatever life they choose, just as it has for my husband and me."

The three boys, Frederick "Rick," 25, Mark, 21, and Tom, 18, have all been awarded music scholarships to Western Michigan University, Kalamazoo, Mich.

Rick has moved on to Idaho State University in Pocatello and continues with his music activities despite the time he devotes to the ISU Student Senate, of which he was elected president.

Mark majored in violin at Western Michigan and Tom, who is studying there now, plays the French horn in the concert band and the alto horn in the marching band.

The three girls are also deeply involved in music. Jeanne, 23, a first grade teacher, has sung in productions and choirs all her life, as has her sister, Lee Ann, 18. Lee Ann will enter the University of Colorado in Denver this fall as a nursing student, but plans to continue to play her flute and guitar.

Kay, 16, the youngest, is still in high school, where she is active in band and orchestra.

"None of our family earns a living from music, but we derive a better life from it," says Mrs. Niswander, who is organist for her church and editor of a monthly newsletter for the chemical company for which her husband is general manager.

Although the younger family members are scattered now, they all come together at Christmas for a family tradition of 12 years — caroling for neighbors and friends, and giving a concert at church before Christmas Eve service.

Attitudes on drugs

Drug abuse is a major problem in the U.S. What do you know about drugs and about users? Compare your views with those of some experts. 1. Drug abuse is limited primarily to those under 25. True ( ) False ( ) 2. There was almost no drug use among women in the 19th century. True ( ) False ( ) 3. Young men who have problems dealing with success and ambition tend to choose the same drugs as young women with similar problems. True ( ) False ( ) 4. We hear a great deal about the use of marijuana among the young but in a recent survey less than half of those polled had tried it and the number had decreased in the past decade. True ( ) False ( ) 5. The primary danger of continued use of marijuana is its damaging physical effect. True ( ) False ( ) 6. Marijuana is an addictive drug. True ( ) False ( ) 7. Most young people have the same reason for smoking marijuana. True ( ) False ( ) 8. The public attitude toward drug use has changed significantly over the past decade. True ( ) False ( ) ANSWERS: 1. FALSE. Drug abuse may be even more serious among the elderly than among the young. One psychiatrist refers to the problem as the "spaced-out grandma" syndrome. According to Dr. Sidney Cohen, clinical professor of psychiatry, some older persons use drugs in an attempt to escape from loneliness and boredom. 2. FALSE. In the 19th century when opiates were legal, two-thirds of the users were women. In recent years, barbiturates have become increasingly popular among women. 3. FALSE. Young men attempting to deal with problems about success choose marijuana to help them reduce the competitive, combative urge their parents established in them. Women with the same problems tend to choose amphetamines to enable them to work harder. 4. FALSE. The number of marijuana users has increased. A recent Gallup survey reported that the precentage of college students who had tried the drug jumped to 55 per cent, an increase from 1967 when only one in 20 said that he had used it. 5. FALSE. The real danger in marijuana is that it's an easy way out of reality. This is especially dangerous when young people use it to escape rather than to face and solve their problems. Because of this psychological effect, marijuana use can slow down the maturation process. 6. FALSE. Marijuana is not physically addictive. Whether or not it is psychologically addictive is debatable. Any person who turns to drugs to avoid emotional problems, to get instant courage, to remove inhibitions, or when he's nervous, depressed, or anxious, is apt to become psychologically hooked on some drug. 7. FALSE. The experimental drug user may try marijuana once or twice because he's curious or because he wants to show his defiance, while others turn to it because they feel alienated, unrelated and unsupported by their parents. Still others use drugs to ease their pain and then become psychologically addicted. 8. TRUE. Overall, American drug use patterns, with the exception of marijuana smoking, finally seem to have leveled off. Attitudes have changed markedly and while more Americans have negative attitudes about the addictive effects of tobacco and alcohol and all the hard drugs, attitudes about marijuana have relaxed. The number now in favor of decriminalization has risen and a majority of Americans feel present penalties too severe.

DEAR DR. JOYCE BROTHERS: I'm a registered nurse and am considered a good one by most doctors. My patients usually like me and I have always enjoyed my work. I made a bad decision in telling my husband I'd stay home to nurse him back to health after his stroke. He's the most impossible patient I've ever had the misfortune to come in contact with. His doctors feel he'd make a complete recovery if he'd follow orders and take reasonable care of himself, but he won't do anything I tell him and he complains constantly. What should I do? — T.V.

DEAR T.V.: I honestly think the best move would be for you to hire a nurse to care for your husband and for you to return to your job. In this way, when you get home, you'll both have something fresh to contribute to each other. When you're around him, try to forget you're a nurse. Perform the tasks that any wife would do, but don't allow yourself to get trapped into the routine you're now facing. Let his nurse be the professional in the home.

I realize men aren't going to like this, buy many males find it extremely difficult to admit their dependency needs and this makes illness a special problem. Men often equate weakness with femininity and they, therefore, feel sickness somehow robs them of their masculinity. This makes them angry and they may take it out on the doctor or nurse.

It will help your marriage if you can get out of the way, and let someone else take over.

GOSH holds exhibit

Griswold's Art Gallery in Claremont is showing "The Ceremonial Object," a multi-media exhibit by four resident artists through July.

Featured at Griswold's Old School House will be the wood work of Richard Patterson, ceramics by Ken Smith and Connie Layne and glass by Rhys Williams. The artists will give demonstrations during the month.

Patterson has exhibited his furniture in California Design 1976 at the Pacific Design Center. He makes dulcimers that were selected for the Craft and Folk Art Museum show of musical instruments, and has been invited to demonstrate his work at the 1976 Los Angeles County Fair, the American Crafts Council Pacific States Crafts Fair and the past three Los Angeles County Museum of Natural History Crafts Festivals. His lathe-turned tops in rare woods are in many collections. He received his B.A. degree from Cal State Los Angeles.

Smith produces decorative and functional wheel-thrown stoneware. In addition to being a fine studio potter, he is the manager/instructor of the Griswold's "Claremont Clay Workshop." He received his B.A. degree at Cal State Long Beach.

Williams has exhibited in many juried and invitational shows, most recently Hallie's West Gallery. He teaches glass blowing at Pitzer College, and Cal State Fullerton, as well as demonstrating at the Griswold's Art Gallery. He received his B.F.A degree from Ohio University and his M.A. degree from Illinois State University.

Miss Layne is an instructor for Claremont Adult Education. She is an annual contributor to the KCET Auction. Her self-description: "I am a middle-aged hippie potter person. I dig dirt!"

Griswold's Gallery features 20 sustaining artists and a changing program of one-person, multi-person and invitational shows on a monthly schedule. The center encompasses a fine arts gallery, seven studios, ceramics gallery and a ceramics workshop. The center features many mediums including paintings, hand-blown glass, jewelry, wood, tie-dye, fiber arts, enamels and sculpture.

'Men of Sea' exhibit set

NEW YORK (AP) — The romance and adventure of life aboard the majestic tall windjammers that plied the world's seas in the 19th century can be captured here this summer at the Kodak Gallery.

The free July-Oct. 15 exhibit, "Men of the Sea," examines all aspects of shipboard life on sailing vessels in the early days of American shiping, through photographs, artifacts and films. The show focuses on how men lived, worked and played aboard five types of sailing ships prominent in the era — clippers, whalers, cargo vessels, military ships and fishing vessels.

The exhibition also portrays early beliefs in sea monsters and serpents, looks at mermaids, piracy, superstitions, punishment, food and drink, and traditions, some of which still exist today.

Laguna festival to open

The annual Laguna Beach Festival of Arts and the nightly Pageant of the Masters open Friday at the Irvine Bowl and surrounding grounds. The festival will be open from noon to 11:30 p.m. daily through Aug. 28.

Among the exhibitors this year is a sculptor who describes himself as "happier and more excited than words can tell" since three of his bronzes are being recreated each evening in a Pageant of the Masters, a two-hour presentation of great works of art reproduced with live models posing exactly as in the originals.

The exhibitor is Robert Krantz, whose sculptures have been displayed at the Festival since 1971. His delight at having some of his creations featured in the Pageant stems in part from the fact that it will be in such distinguished company, sharing the program not only with paintings by such artists as Jan Van Eyck and Leonardo da Vinci, but also with masterpieces by sculptors long acclaimed around the world. Michangelo, for example, and Benvenuto Cellini.

Born in Peoria, Ill., Drantz has been an artist throughout his career, having headed straight from school into advertising art in Chicago, where he worked first as an employe and later as partner in a commercial illustration company.

In 1965 he moved to Laguna Beach and became a Festival exhibitor the following year, his booth displaying canbases depicting ships, seascapes and portraits — all in acrylic. Five years later he switched to sculptures, which he describes as "like doing a thousand drawings instead of just one." The added dimension proved to be what he had subconsciously been looking for all through his career, he said.

Collectively billed in the program as "Repose and Flight," the three sculptures represent a trio of young women. Since the works were chosen by Pageant director Don Williamson for recreation in the living art presentation, one of them has won the National Sculpture Society's Special Award in New York. Titled "Fantasy of Wings," it features a young woman surrounded by a flock of airborne pigeons.

Romance in life and work

By NORMAN NADEL

LOS ANGELES (NEA) — With the tip of his brush, Tony Heinsbergen heightened the ecstatic flush on the cheek of an allegorical maiden representing joy, then drew back to get the effect.

He couldn't draw back very far, because the scaffolding was narrow and the theater floor was 70 feet below. That didn't bother Tony, who had spent most of his career up in the air. But people watching from the balcony and orchestra were mighty nervous about the 82-year-old artist working so nonchalantly on the 60-foot-wide dome mural, and he didn't want to worry them any more than necessary.

"Seven hundred and fifty-one," he mumbled to himself, then wondered, "or is it seven fifty two?" Anthony B. Heinsbergen shrugged; it really didn't matter that much. But he had painted the murals for this same theater, the Orpheum in Vancouver, British Columbia, when it was constructed in 1927, and now he was doing the job again in 1977, as the Orpheum was being restored from a derelict old movie palace to a new concert hall, home of the Vancouver Symphony Orchestra.

He settled for the smaller figure. Since he began painting movie palace murals about 1914, which coincidentally was the beginning of that era in the history of American films, he had done a total of 751 such ornate structures. In fact, Tony Heinsbergen has outlived that era. He and his assistants did six or seven theater murals between 1960 and 1964, and that was about the end of it.

MOVIE HOUSE MASTER — Muralist Tony Heinsbergen, shown at work on one of his 751 murals in movie houses, depicts life as it should be and not as it is. He is a self-styled romantic.

Of course, the Orpheum job, which brought him to Vancouver for two months last winter was special, for sentimental reasons, among others.

Born in Holland, Tony had decided early that he wanted to be an artist, and was apprenticed to a painter in Harlem at the age of 11. Two years later, on his 13th birthday, he arrived with his mother, sister and brother in Los Angeles where his father, who had come some time earlier, had already secured the lad a job, again as a painter's apprentice.

At 18, Tony decided to leave home. "Los Angeles was in the dumps at that time," he recalls, "but Seattle was booming. After working in Seattle for about a year for a firm of decorators, I called on a man named Bell, who specialized in theater decoration. I unrolled my samples on the floor of his office and when he had seen about half of them he said: 'that's enough. You go to Portland tonight and start the Opheum theater there.'

"Four years later I went into business for myself and was working in Spokane when I met this wonderful, tiny little girl, Nedith, and 16 days later we were married there on the night the theater I had been working on opened.

"We drove to Vancouver — it took three days then — and had a 10-week honeymoon while I was working on the original Orpheum theater there. That was in 1918. So I have a warm feeling for Vancouver, also for all of Canada, because Nedith — still as wonderful as ever if not more so — was born in Nova Scotia.

"When the 'new' Orpheum was being built in Vancouver in 1927, they asked me to do the murals for it, so back we came. Meanwhile we had established our home in Los Angeles. And when they asked me to re-do the Orpheum murals again this year — well, even though I retired from this sort of work in 1970 — although I still do a lot of easel painting and it sells very well — I couldn't refuse."

It's hardly surprising that an artist who has been lyrically in love with the same "little girl" for 59 wedded years should be romantically inclined in his work. Like the Hollywood movies that were shown in the ornate auditoriums he painted, Tony's imagery depicted life not so much as it was but as it should have been — and should be

In a Heinsbergen mural, the girls are lissome and lovely, airily unselfconscious in their partial nudity. Even if the scene or allegory requires one or two of them to show the darker emotions — indignation, pain or woe — they manage to do it gracefully.

Diagnosing the human condition

EDITOR'S NOTE: Walker Percy gave up his stethoscope long ago, but he still is preoccupied with health and illness. Only now it's as a novelist who diagnoses the human condition. Here is a portrait of the noted author in his Louisiana habitat.

By Hugh A. Mulligan
AP Special Correspondent

COVINGTON, La. (AP) — Out on his Spanish moss-draped patio along the Bogue Falaya River, with one ear cocked for the mating grunt of a bull alligator somewhere amid the cypress knees, novelist Walker Percy looks like anything but an Old Testament scourge calling on the behaviorists' world to repent before it's too late.

He might be mistaken for a kindly country doctor, which he is, after a fashion, and a qualified one at that, always diagnosing mankind, asking: Where does it hurt? Why don't you feel better?

Or on his way home from the little office in town where he writes for three hours every morning, Percy ambles along like a real life version of Atticus Finch, the tall, courtly, soft-spoken attorney in "To Kill a Mocking Bird," stopping to chat as he often does with the good old boys waiting under the courthouse live oaks for the juries to be led out to their lunch.

"Bogue Falaya means River of Mists. People around here think it's haunted. They're spooked by it," he said.

Some of the neighbors, those who read books, think there might be something spooky about Walker Percy. He seems to know things before they happen.

In 1970 Walker wrote a wickedly witty satire, 'Love in the Ruins," a futuristic view of the philosophy of the 1960s, in which American society becomes totally polarized with whites against blacks, hippies against straights, and everybody against everybody else. The book opens with a sniper attack by black guerrillas atop a Howard Johnson's motel on a cloverleaf of the interstate near a city very like New Orleans.

"It was a fun book to write," Percy admits, "but the fun ended on a Sunday in January three years later when The Associated Press called me up in the middle of the night to ask if I was watching television. I said which channel, and they said all three. There was a black sniper on top of the Howard Johnson's Hotel in downtown New Orleans and wounded 16 or 17.

"It was an eerie thing. I was afraid they might find my book among his belongings. They didn't. The room was piled with Maoist literature."

Then along came the energy crisis. People remembered that in the same book automobiles ran out of gas on the highway and washing machines broke down with nobody to fix them.

"I have absolutely no visionary powers," Percy shakes his head. "If I did, I'd have taken automobile mechanics in high school. I'm selling two cars now that I can't get fixed because nobody wants to be a repairman anymore."

Percy writes lefthanded in pencil on "regular Blue Horse ring binder filler sheets bought 300 at a time at the A&P." After his ritual three-hour grind in his cluttered office in the Covington Arts Committee building, he spends the afternoon at home laboriously pecking out the results. "The typing is horrendous, but this is an important stage, where I make all my inserts and corrections."

Now 61, Percy wrote his first novel, "The Moviegoer," at 45. It won the National Book Award and established him as a literary oddity: A serious writer with something to say and able to say it in graceful, lucid prose that is often full of surprises.

Take, for example, these excerpts from "Lancelot," his latest novel giving unshirted hell to B.F. Skinner and the behaviorist psychologists.

—"An odd thing about New Orleans: The cemeteries here are more cheerful than the hotels and the French Quarter. Tell me why that should be, why two thousand dead Creoles should be more alive than two thousand Buick dealers?"

—"The Northerner is at heart a pornographer. He is an abstract mind with a genital attached. His soul is at Harvard, a large abstract locked-in sterile university whose motto is truth but which has not discovered an important truth in a hundred years. His body lives on Forty-Second Street."

Percy is preoccupied with sin and evil, the classic stuff of Milton, Conrad and Melville that he regrets has "gone sadly out of style, almost disappeared in a behaviorist world where man is just an organism responding to his environment and not responsible for any of his actions. Hitler. Hiroshima. There's an excuse for everything."

He is concerned about man and what mars his humanity, and he fears that the permissive age's hollow message of doing your own thing has brought about a decline in the discipline and a rise in greed.

"Because of my

Blackburn said more than 300,000 Indians were living in California by the time the Spanish arrived. One of their practices just now being given a hard look by U.S. Forest Service experts, was that of controlled brush and forest burning.

"They found that a controlled burn which would allow new growth, doubled deer herds and quadrupled rabbit populations," he said.

"These people were some of the most intelligent in the world," Blackburn said.

LANCASTER, Pa. (AP) — A lot of teen-agers still pass time occasionally by playing Monopoly: buying property, acquiring houses and hotels and buying into utilities.

But for T. Winfield Hauck and Gregg A. Weaver, who have just graduated from Manheim Township High School, the "game" is for real.

Hauck, 19, and Weaver, 18, are partners in a new but booming company, Amalgamated Rentals Co. Their holdings today number 13 rental properties to which they hold title, under mortgage, of course.

Hauck and Weaver insist they have only just begun their own private and serious version of Monopoly. Now they expect to channel their property acquisition in the direction of "large apartment house."

From there the next move is, as any Monopoly buff might guess, to hotels, preferably in Atlantic City. And, one day, if all goes according to the plan which thus far has served them so well, Amalgamated Rentals will move into railroading, which Hauck sees as the future transportation hope of this country.

Hauck was the originating force behind this ambitious thrust. Ever since he was old enough to earn money doing odd jobs, he has managed his money sufficiently well to nurture a savings account.

"Then one day when I was about 16," he said, "I was riding down the street and I saw this stock brokerage and decided to look into buying stocks."

He made his first investment a $92 purchase. The stock purchases increased with young Hauck's purchasing power until about a year and a half later when the then 17-year-old decided there must be more action for his hard-earned cash.

"Stocks had paid off pretty good," he said, "but my goal was to someday own a resort hotel in Atlantic City so I thought why not go from stocks into real estate, to start with property, then houses and on up to hotels, just like in Monopoly."

He found willing and helpful realtors and friends in Enid and Bob Niquette of a local real estate firm.

"I was impressed right off with his interest," Niquette said. "I explained the investment return potentials and the pitfalls as well. By the time he was 17½, we had his first property under agreement. We settled on his 18th birthday so he could have the property entirely in his own name."

One major reason the Hauck master plan has proceded so well is the business influence brought into the venture by Hauck's partner. Hauck, who had already acquired and rented out other properties, admits the business at that point still had some rough edges despite professional guidance from lawyers and accountants. With Weaver's emergence religious belief, I see man as a pilgrim, a searcher in the Judeo-Christian tradition," he says. "From the novelist's point of view that makes us better off than the Buddhists, Marxists and Freudians, who don't write very good novels."

Percy is impressed with the new moral tone in Washington and President Carter's personal sense of sin. "You can't fault it," he muses, "even if it sets your teeth on edge. We're not used to hearing presidents guide us along paths of theological orthodoxy. He probably means it.

"I was thinking the other night that what makes Southerners different is that they are more complex, more indirect, capable of much more corruption and evil and maybe much more moral goodness. All it means is the two, evil and good, can be very close: Morality implies a sense of sin and corruption. Lester Maddox and the others may regard Carter as something of a hypocrite, but I like the answer: That's like being called ugly by a frog."

Percy attended the University of North Carolina, a center of the behaviorists, and early on began to wonder why science spent so much time worrying about the similarity of man to the animals and "so little about the differences."

Percy took his M.D. at Columbia University's College of Physicians and Surgeons and would have been asking his probing, diagnostic questions in a doctor's office today had he not contracted tuberculosis performing autopsies on Bowery bums in New York City's Bellevue Hospital.

As was medical custom in those days, the patient was shipped off to brood and shiver and breathe fresh air on a sanitorium porch overlooking Lake Saranac in the Adirondacks. The long exile brought him back to books, the French and the Russian novelists, and gave him time to try his hand at writing. He abandoned medicine and, life imitating art again, became one of the characters in his as yet unwritten novel: "A Doctor Who Doesn't Doctor."

Dr. Percy said his medical background is still important to him.

"Medical training gave me a diagnostic outlook on life. Here is something wrong with people. Why does man feel so bad in the best of environments? Why has man embarked on an orgy of war, murder, torture and self-destruction unparalled in history in the very century when he hoped to see the dawn of universal peace?

"That is the natural stance of the doctor: What ails you? Maybe that's what sets me apart from other American writers. I'm a novelist addressing the question of something gone wrong."

Deeply rooted in Javanese mysticism

Indonesian shadow puppet shows entertain — inform

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Drama presented by the shadows cast by puppets might not wow them on Broadway, but it's been pulling in crowds here for more than a thousand years.

The wayang kulit, or shadow puppet show, is not an Asian version of Punch and Judy. It's an ancient art form with modern political clout. The wayang of 1977 is mass entertainment deeply rooted in Javanese mysticism; the spirits of the dead are believed to inhabit the shadows of the puppets.

More than 20,000 puppetmasters, called dalangs, are active in this country of 135 million, most of them on Java.

The government had long been aware of the key communications role played by dalangs in a country where only two per cent of the population read newspapers, and radio and TV have limited impact.

At the government's bidding, dalangs have promoted birth control on overcrowded Java, better rice growing methods and the political status quo.

The multiple talents of Indonesia's puppetmasters start with sheer stamina. Wayangs are all-night affairs lasting nine hours or more. Some extravaganzas require several nights to complete

Dalangs have memorized the lines of scores of verse plays and rattle them off in different accents for dozens of characters. The dalangs sing and chant while weaving through the complex story, and they simultaneously direct a 20-member gamelan, or orchestra, by coded tapping on a foot knocker.

The dalang manipulates his cast from behind a translucent white screen lighted from above to make the puppets appear as black shadows to the audience. Elaborate punched-out patterns give their shadows the look of fine lace.

Themes for the wayang come mostly from the Ramayana and the Mahabharata, Hindu epics brought here 1,500 years ago from India. These, blended with earlier tales of Javanese ancestor cults and historical legends, are presented by flickering shadows.

The wayang is a village ritual in Java, held to mark births, weddings, circumcisions or the "purification" of a home or the entire community.

Musicians play an overture on their gongs, xylophones and drums, while the dalang burns incense and offers prayers before moving behind the screen for his overnight stint.

About three hours are devoted to outlining the plot and introducing the main characters, which every Javanese child knows by heart.

To end certain acts the dalang may bring on three characters called Garang, Petruk and Semar, whose slapstick exchanges carry any message the puppetmaster is trying to put across. The trio is used to summarize main points and to comment on current events and government policy.

A star among dalangs, who authorities say are born with semidivine talents, may collect 50,000 rupiahs (about $120) for a single performance, approximately the average annual per capita income for Indonesians. Lesser talents get about half as much and perform some 15 times a month.

The Javanese town of Klaten has the country's only dalang school, which turns out about five trained puppetmasters each year.

Donates manuscripts

PULLMAN, Wash. (AP) — The man who gave the world "The Peter Principle" has donated manuscripts of his two best-selling books to Washington State University, a school spokesman said.

Laurence J. Peter became a celebrity in 1969, when "The Peter Principle" was published. It outlines his theory that every employe in every organization eventually rises to his or her own level of incompetence.

The manuscript of that book and a sequel, "The Peter Plan" are being turned over to the university where Peter received a doctorate in education in 1963.

as a partner the venture took on new organizational strength.

Separate bank accounts established as kitties for taxes, maintenance and other needs were consolidated. Detailed ledgers were initiated and checking accounts replaced complicated banking procedures.

Being so heavily mortgaged doesn't bother them. "It's smarter to borrow for a profit than to buy outright," Hauck said, citing tax advantages.

Of the properties they now hold, nine are at present operable and four in the process of rehabilitation. The latter four were purchased recently, three attached row houses from the Lancaster Redevelopment Authority for $500 each and one from a local bank for $400 in the same neighborhood, a marginal ghetto.

They now have a fulltime staff of five, each working in some renovation or maintenance specialty.

"We plan to start moving more into sales instead of rentals and to reinvest proceeds from sales in the acquisition of properties in higher market areas," Hauck said.

"We try to keep our properties in liveable condition and we've had to do a lot of work on some of them," he said. "The whole thing has meant a lot of work and sacrifice, especially social life, of which we have practically none."

As for the loss of social life, Hauck and Weaver, who now devote full time to their business, which is in the process of incorporation, rationalize that this aspect of their lives is merely being postponed, not forsaken.

"By the time we're 25, we hope to have made our fortune and then we can get married like everyone else," Hauck said without a trace of jest.

Teacher says writers are made—not born

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Anyone can write, and derive great pleasure from it, says Warren Hecht, a writer and lecturer at the University of Michigan's Residential College (RC).

Hecht has never required prospective students to submit samples of their work before he accepts them in his courses. Many, in fact, have had little writing experience beyond letters home.

Yet they have acquired 45 Hopwood Awards for creative writing in essay, fiction, drama and poetry at the U-M during the past seven years.

Like many other courses in the RC, a small liberal arts college within the larger university, "creative writing" is designed to stimulate the student's general growth and self-awareness — not just to build technical skills.

"The first step is gaining confidence," Hecht says, "overcoming the self-consciousness of putting words down on paper. From that point, writing is like golf: it takes practice and polishing to develop an effective style. When you have achieved a style that is clear and coherent, you can convey anything."

Hecht does not claim to transform illiterates into Hemingways, but he manages to convince each student that writing is a useful and satisfying art form. His class often has 30 to 50 persons on the waiting list.

Recent studies, Hecht notes, have reported a marked decline in students' writing abilities and interests in this electronic age. The National Assessment of Educational Progress, for example, found that only about half of the 17-year-olds it surveyed could even construct simple sentences.

One reason for this, Hecht suggests, is that high school writing courses tend to be taught by English teachers, trained in literature and grammar, rather than by writers themselves.

"To me, writing is more akin to a sports activity than an academic subject," he explains. "Would the school turn over the football team to someone who has only sat in the grandstand? No, it hires a coach with playing experience. Writing should be taught by someone with experience also."

Hecht was writing poems for his school literary magazine at the age of 6, and has published numerous short stories. As an outlet for other writers, including some of his students, he established the Street Fiction Press in Ann Arbor, which has published some 20 original periodicals and paperbacks.

He says he relishes being able to combine all three aspects of the field — writing, publishing and teaching — in one career.

When students protest that they have nothing to write about, Hecht answers: "I'm sure that at least two interesting things have happened to you during your lifetime. Describe them or lie about them.

"Don't expect it to sound perfect the first time," he adds. "The first time you walk over to a piano and pound on the keys, the sound is terrible. But with practice, you can make beautiful music.

"Write about things you know, and don't assume that they won't be interesting to others," he advises.."

Pigeon racing popular

SEATTLE (AP) — If horse racing is the "sport of kings," what does that make pigeon racing?

It makes pigeon racing the sport of the people — about 18,00 American people.

"I used to raise pigeons when I was a kid," says Jack Chavis, of the East Hill Invitational Pigeon Racing Club. "Then when I was about 18, I got rid of them and started chasing girls. I got back into pigeons after I got married."

Successful racing pigeons fetch high prices when sold for breeding. One retired European pigeon was sold last year for $23,000.

In a race, the entries are released from a single location and the birds then fly home. Since "home" can be one of several thousand lofts, the winner is the one to fly over the most yards per second.

Puget Sound Concourse members can participate in 16 races this season. Any Saturday afternoon you can find those improving the pigeon breed looking skyward, calculating winnings and losings.

The race from Battle Ground, near the Oregon border, 104 air miles away, to the Puget Sound area is the shortest, and the race from Burney, Calif., is the longest at 442 miles.

No one knows exactly how a pigeon finds its way home. One theory is that the pigeon can sense magnetic fields, which vary at locations other than the bird's home.

The races tell each handler and breeder how successful he has been in his training techniques.

Racers like to talk about how a New York City pigeon racer won $43,000 in a club pool two years ago.

Jack Cataline, another member of the East Hill Invitational Club, had a pigeon that became so exhausted it decided to walk home. Someone in Oregon spotted it heading north on the freeway

EDITOR'S NOTE: Since the mid 1970s, political violence has wracked Argentina. About 1,500 persons were killed last year, some 480 so far this year. One of the urban guerrillas' favorite weapons is the bomb. One of the most dangerous jobs is investigating them. An AP correspondent reports on one night in the life of the Buenos Aires bomb squad.

By WILLIAM F. NICHOLSON
Associated Press Writer

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Inspector Scartascini, 27, and his colleagues on the bomb squad have a favorite joke.

Why do they wear heavy chest protectors on the job?

So there's something left to bury.

"A sense of humor, even if it's morbid, helps in this job," says Scartascini, en route in his chauffeured red squad truck to investigate a suspicious parcel.

"The operational section numbers around 40," says Capt. Hillcoat, its chief. "Since 1971, we have had 10 people killed and 20 wounded so seriously that they left on disability."

During 1976, when the military ousted President Isabel Peron in a coup and began a battle against the far-left, 1,480 persons were killed in political violence. Of these, some 1,000 were reported to be left-wing guerrillas. The death toll so far this year stands at 485.

The squad, known as "la Brigada de Explosivos," is attached to the Argentine federal police. It is divided into operations, investigations and training sections. Operations defuses bombs. Investigations does detective work and the training unit teaches brigade recruits and analyzes new devices.

The operational section is split into three-man units. Each squad truck has a driver, officer and non-commissioned officer. At any given time, there are at least four trucks on duty in Buenos Aires. In an emergency, scores of men from the other two divisions can be mustered in less than an hour.

The squad has U.S.-made helmets and chest protectors, Israeli-made detectors which electronically "smell" explosives to classify them; and British-made "mini-carriers," tiny remote-controlled tanks which can pick up suspicious packages, examine them by television and explode them with a built-in shotgun.

The problem: The left-wing urban guerrillas in Argentina are nearly as sophisticated.

Inspector Rodriguez, 26, hefted a live hand grenade that was made in a clandestine factory by the Montoneros, who like other left-wing groups have obtained millions of dollars in kidnap ransoms, bank robberies and extortion in recent years. Much of it is used to buy arms.

The guerrillas use transistorized devices powered by mercury batteries. Sometimes, they rely on chemicals which time themselves for detonation.

In 1959, the bomb squad was called out 26 times. It made 3,205 runs last year and more than 1,200 runs in the first half of this year.

The workload increases in direct proportion to the success of security forces in eliminating the guerrillas, according to Inspector Commissioner Agustin Italo Martini, over-all chief of the bomb squad. This is because the guerrillas are losing the capacity to mount large operations, and, therefore, use bombs because less effort is needed.

Bomb squad members work a 24-hour shift and then have four days off. In addition to their regular salary — about $215 monthly for an inspector — each bomb squad member receives a dangerous duty bonus of $265 a month.

"The police always investigate any bomb call first," says Scartascini, "to make sure that we aren't being led into an ambush. Then they clear people from the area."

Scartascini and his assistant donned helmets and chest protectors and grabbed a briefcase filled with special tools and detonators. They were to investigate a package reported on the back stairwell of the sixth floor of a building where two army colonels live.

"We try to use machines instead of men wherever we can," the inspector says, "but the guerrillas always try to keep one step ahead. They know that our mini-tanks can't get into tight places like stairwells or bathrooms."

The two men took the elevator to the fifth floor. "It's wise to get off on the floor below," Scartascini warns. "That way, you can sort of sneak up to whatever is there and look it over from a distance."

The police had made a mistake. The package, neatly gifted-wrapped, confronted them as they emerged from the elevator.

Scartascini moved cautiously, stared at the package, reached out and patted it. He took out a razor-sharp knife and sliced the ribbon, made a small incision in the paper and paused.

The parcel was four empty spaghetti boxes.

"It was done on purpose," he said. "People don't wrap up empty spaghetti boxes. It was done to frighten."

GRANDVIEW SERIES—LEWIS HOMES

Located in Alta Loma

Grandview Series variety vying for buyers' favor

An arched gateway and atrium court, reminiscent of a Mediterranean villa's entryway, a split-level plan at Lewis Home's new Grandview Series. It is one of a variety of intriguingly designed models vying for buyers' favor at the community of single-family homes in Alta Loma.

The model, Plan 956, displays four bedrooms, three baths, a separate breakfast nook and a large family room in its 2,305 square feet of livable area. A raised entry and a wet bar are other downstairs features.

Three bedrooms occupy the homes upper level, the master bedroom suite being glamorized by a step-up oval bathtub, twin sink basins, a dressing area and a walk-in wardrobe. The fourth bedroom is set on the downstairs floor for optional use as a den.

One and two-story plans, in addition to the split-level, are available at the Grandview Series, whose Phase II is now in construction. All are set on 10,000-square-foot lot sites, and feature refrigerated air-conditioning. Sales price is currently bracketed from $68,900 to $88,500.

Shake roofs, covered porchways dominate the homes' exterior architecture, while beautiful entries and artistic fireplace sculpture set the theme of interior decor.

Master bedroom suites display mirrored wardrobe doors and double sink basins recessed in cultured marble pullman cabinets. Garden kitchens have luminous ceilings and eating counters.

"Beyond the luxurious touches we're building into all Grandview Series models," said Lewis Homes President Richard A. Lewis, "individual models provide such additional refinements as wet bars, double front doors, sunken living rooms, 3-car garages and indoor laundry rooms."

Completed display models are now being shown. They may be reached from the San Bernardino Freeway by exiting at Vineyard Avenue in Alta Loma. From there the route is north on Vineyard (which becomes Carnelian Street) approximately four miles to 19th Street, then east one block to Beryl and right to the sales office.

Window booklet

Replacing odd-shaped windows needn't be a problem. The opening can be reduced, for example, by blocking with 2x4s. Additional tips on carpentry involving windows are in a helpful booklet. A free copy of "Easy Window Installation" can be obtained by writing Andersen Corporation, Dept. DYW, Bayport, Minn. 55003.

Green thumb

"There's gold in them thar" lawns. According to real estate appraisers, a well-kept lawn adds $1,400 to the value of a house in the $50,000 range. Attractive flowers, trees and shrubs can add another $1,500.

Voluntary conservation aspects applauded

Realtor's support Carter's energy 'goals'

WASHINGTON — The National Association of Realtors has expressed general support for those portions of the President's energy plan dealing with conservation in the home, and described its own program to promote energy conservation.

Harry G. Elmstrom, president of the 500,000-member association, testified before the Senate Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs Committee, which is holding hearings on S. 1469, the National Energy Act.

Elmstrom applauded voluntary aspect of the President's energy program, saying that a mandatory program for retro-fitting existing homes would not work and that the surest incentive for energy conservation is ever-rising utility bills.

But he added that it is essential that homeowners be convinced of the real need to install insulation and otherwise conserve energy.

"To this end, the National Association of Realtors has launched an ambitious energy conservation program designed to raise public awareness regarding the need for conservation in the residential sector," he said.

"Realtors throughout the country are presenting material and information at the settlement table to encourage the new homeowner to conserve energy. Material has been sent out and will continue to be sent out to more than 1,700 local boards of Realtors."

Specifically, Elmstrom said, Realtors can support these provisions of S. 1469.

—The requirement that public utilities offer residential customers an energy conservation program, with adequate safeguards as to honest workmanship and reasonable cost.

—Amendments to the National Housing Act, which would qualify loans for energy conservation and solar energy installation for Federal Housing Administration insurance.

—Development of a secondary market for residential energy conservation loans through the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Association and the Federal National Mortgage Association. Those organizations currently purchase residential first mortgage loans from primary lenders, but are not permitted to purchase home improvement loans for energy saving.

—The adoption of reasonable energy conservation performance standards for new buildings, with federal grants to state and local governments to assist them in implementing such standards.

However, Elmstrom expressed the Realtors' strong opposition to two proposals he said Congress may be asked to approve. One he identified as use of sanctions to enforce adoption of energy standards for new construction.

"One sanction that our association has opposed consistently is the prohibition on conventional lending by financial institutions chartered or insured by the federal government," he said. "We strongly believe that sanction goes too far. We would, therefore, strongly oppose any program that attempted to implement building energy standards in this manner."

Elstrom also took issue with a recent action by a House energy subcommittee, which he said brings the issue of mandatory home insulation to the forefront. The subcommittee's bill contains a provision requiring that homes be brought up to an energy performance standard at the time of sale.

Failure to meet the standard would mean prohibition of mortgage financing, both conventional and federally assisted.

We cited four "compelling" reasons why the association believes this approach to be "extremely ill-advised":

—It would delay voluntary energy conservation efforts, since homeowners would not risk insulation efforts now, only to find that they were not in compliance with a standard to be developed five years hence.

—Such a standard would be difficult if not impossible to develop because of differences in home design and construction and climatic conditions. Also, its cost-effectiveness would be unknown.

—A mandatory program would increase inflationary trends for weatherizing materials and services.

—A mandatory program would bring an inordinate amount of government intrusion into the lives of homeowners.

Far preferable, Elmstrom said, is the approach taken by the House Banking Committee, calling for a one-year study of the impact and feasibility of a mandatory "time of sale" program.

Mark III grand opening staged

The Grand Opening of Mark IIIs new homes this weekend will be highlighted by the widest selection in the company's history. Mark III will offer eighteen different designs, six floor plans, and a choice of 3, 4, or 5 bedrooms and 2 or 3 baths.

Mark III says its position as a quality home builder cannot be maintained unless an offering in depth is maintained and luxury features included as part of the purchase price.

Some of the extra features included as part of the purchase price are: Spanish Tile roofs, electric garage door openers, air conditioning, tinted windows, ceramic tile entries, garden or Roman baths, and mirrored wardrobe doors. Many additional features are offered which are usually optional extras.

Mark III offers the visitor a complete itemized list and the approximate cost if the buyer had to add the item himself. They report the savings to the buyer and the convenience of having these features in the home before purchase have been very well received. Mark III spokemen say that they will offer greater use of natural materials in the exterior and interior of the homes such as real tile entries, rustic wood facing, interior rock and brick.

Jeff Rice, Sales Manager, said, "We build a quality home, generally purchased by families as their success home. As one succeeds in their field and in their society they wish to have a home that reflects that achievement."

Rapid sales pace reported

Value seen in Upper Westwood

With home prices what they are today, real value is seen as the primary factor contributing to the rapid sales pace currently being enjoyed at Upper Westwood Townhomes, according to Arley Burke, sales manager at the development.

The two-bedroom, two-bath homes are priced from $29,900 and include private patio yards, enclosed two-car garages, spacious master suites, central air conditioning and plush wall-to-wall carpeting.

"It would be hard to duplicate the total package we are offering here at Upper Westwood," said Burke. "Not only is the price very appealing, but with what that price includes, plus the inherent advantages of ownership, buying at Upper Westwood is a wise investment for today, as well as tomorrow."

Ownership at Upper Westwood entitles families to a host of community benefits, including two large swimming pools, a hot pool and children's play area. All common expenses including gardening will be taken care of by the homeowner's association for a modest monthly fee.

Burke also said that the homes are ideally suited for young families and singles who have a desire to enter the housing market and until now have been unable to afford to buy a home.

A furnished model is on display daily at Upper Westwood, which can be reached by taking the San Bernardino Freeway to the Indian Hill exit in Claremont. Drive south ¼ mile to San Bernardino Avenue, right on San Bernardino two blocks to Appleton, then right to the homes. The model-sales office is located at 1821 Appleton, Pomona.

Corona land company president resigns

James C. Cashman, president of Corona Land Co. of Corona the last five years, has resigned to pursue other business interests, it was announced this week by Ned Willitts, chairman of the board.

"We regretfully accept Jim's resignation," said Willitts. "He has done an outstanding job and we would have liked him to remain with us. However, since he has successfully completed the major projects on which he's been working for up to eight years, we can understand his desire to return to operating his own building firm."

A Riverside resident, Cashman revealed that he has established The Homestead Company, Inc., with temporary offices at 2323 Mary St., Riverside. He has a 23-home development underway in Riverside and is planning another in the city, but has not yet disclosed details on either.

Turn down water heater

You can beat the heat of high utility costs by turning down the control of your hot water heater, says the National Association of Realtors.

Nearly every hot water heater has a control which permits the owner to select such settings as warm, very warm, and hot. Too many people keep the setting on hot when they don't need to, wasting valuable energy heating water to a temperature higher than necessary. Keep the temperature down to 110-120 degrees.

Such a waste of energy results in a higher utility bill for the owner, as well as unnecessary waste of electricity or natural gas.

Local Realtors are offering a folder, "The Energy Crisis Hits Home!", which contains tips on saving money and energy.

Save water when brushing teeth

Turn off the water when you're brushing your teeth and save both money and this precious natural resource.

If you allow the water to run while you're brushing your teeth, you waste 2½ gallons of water, says the National Association of Realtors. For a family of four, brushing their teeth twice a day, that is a waste of 20 gallons a day.

For a year, that is a waste of 7,300 gallons. In a city of 100,000 people, if everyone let the water run while they brushed their teeth, that community would waste 730,000,000 gallons of water annually.

Copies of a free folder, "The Energy Crisis Hits Home!", are available from the local Board of Realtors or individual Realtors.

Western U.S. leads nation

In 1976, the western region of the United States led the nation in proportion of existing single-family homes sold in upper-price brackets. The National Association of Realtors reports about 41 per cent of all resale homes sold in the western region were priced at $50,000 or more, compared with 34.4 per cent in the northeast region, 26.9 per cent in the South and 16.7 per cent in the north central region of the nation.

Housing starts dropped in April

New housing starts in California for April were down sharply from the March rate, according to Bank of America.

The seasonally adjusted annual rate of starts in April was 222,000 units, 24 per cent less than than the March rate of 292,000 units. Actual starts only declined 10 per cent, the bank added, but April usually records a strong seasonal increase.

Actual housing starts in California for the first four months of 1977 were up 66 per cent from the same period last year, bank economists said. Single family housing starts continue to account for about two-thirds of the total starts in the state.

Median sales price for existing homes sold in the West was $46,100, exceeding the national median sales price by $8,000. Other areas and their median home prices were $41,800 for the northeast region, $36,500 for the South, and $32,900 for the north central region.

New concept introduced in air freight service

INGLEWOOD (BW) — A new concept which will greatly improve air freight service and save millions of dollars a year for shippers, forwarders and airlines was announced by Jet Air Freight.

Joseph K. Taussig III, president of Jet, said his company is working with scheduled supplemental and third level carriers to establish a network of chartered aircraft to carry air cargoes for forwarders.

Under the new concept, a chartered air freighter in each of some 50 cities throughout the continental United States will accept containerized cargo from various air freight forwarders. Each of these air freighters will fly to the same destination, a city in the mid-United States.

There, Taussig explained, all freight containers from all aircraft will be unloaded and sorted by Jet employes operating a highly automated system. The chartered air freighters will stand by pending completion of the sort.

In the sort, the containers will be repacked by destination and by forwarder. Then each of the chartered freighters will return to its city of origin, carrying all of the freight destined for that city.

When each aircraft completes this "backhaul" portion of its flight, representatives of the air freight forwarders will pick up their respective shipments and deliver them just as they do under the conventional system.

Jet plans to begin Hub service in the fall of 1977, providing service to more than 120 of the largest markets in the United States.

The company will make Topeka, Kan. the Hub City in its operation and has reached agreement in principle with city officials to do so.

"Topeka is centrally located, it has an excellent airport which can accommodate our traffic, and the weather conditions are acceptable year-round," Taussig said.

He said the Jet System is similar to that of Federal Express, with several important distinctions.

"We will have larger aircraft efficiencies that are beyond the capability of the small Falcon jets of Federal Express, but we will not require the hundreds of millions of dollars of capital Federal Express would need to duplicate out system," Taussig said. "The aircraft are already owned by the airline participants.

"There will not be the weight limitations which exist in the Federal Express carriers.

"Marketing will be conducted by air freight forwarders who will be able to tailor services to the needs of the individual shipper."

"We have had extensive discussions with virtually every major airline and forwarder," he said. "Enthusiasm has been far greater than we expected and we may have a problem satisfying demand.

"Our Hub Concept offers the forwarder overnight service between more than 120 communities. This is critical because freighter service has declined drastically over the last five years."

Taussig noted that John C. Emery Jr., president of Emery Air Freight, has pointed to this situation, saying "scheduled airlines previously offered night freighter service between about 50 markets, but now only 12 of those markets receive service."

Jet Air Freight will charter aircraft from various commercial carriers. The aircraft will range in size from Boeing 747s to DC-3s, depending on the requirements of each route served.

The Hub Concept greatly reduces the number of flights needed to provide freighter service in the United States, Taussig said. "To serve the combinations possible between 50 cities, 2,450 flights are needed by the conventional air freighter services," he said.

"In the Hub Concept only 50 flights are needed if lift capacity is well matched to the size of the market."

Forwarders could greatly reduce air haul costs and terminal expenses and add up to 20 per cent to 25 per cent more of sales revenues to their bottom lines, Taussig said.

The airlines will also benefit substantially from the Hub Concept since they will gain more hours of utilization from their aircraft, which is a key factor for success in this capital intensive industry, he said.

In addition, the carrier will be absolved of the load factor risk, resulting in a higher degree of stability for the industry. Also, the backhaul problem is eliminated for the carriers since the freighters originate and terminate in the same city.

"The ultimate beneficiary of the Hub Concept will be the shipper," Taussig said. "He will get far better service than is available today and he should in time obtain it at less cost as forwarders pass some of their savings on to him as they compete for his business.

Retirees' pay set

'Double dippers' get two checks"

By ERIC RUFF
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — "Double Dippers" — retired military personnel who work for the federal government and draw both retirement pay and a civilian salary — were paid more than $2.7 billion in 1975.

The Civil Service Commission said recently that the money was spread over 141,000 military retirees now working in some new capacity for the federal government.

A Civil Service spokesman said a vast majority (65.8 per cent) of the 'double dippers" are earning annual salaries of $10,000 to $18,000, in addition to their regular retirement pay.

The spokesman said 17 per cent of the 141,000 are earning $6,000 to $9,999 and 13 per cent between $18,000 and $28,999. Just more than 2 per cent of the "double dippers" are earning $29,000 or more annually, he said.

A Defense Department spokesman said at present 18 congressmen are receiving retirement pay in addition to their $57,600-a-year salary. He said about 40 other members are eligible for the retirement income but have declined acceptance.

The Civil Service Commission says more than $22 million is saved annually by the 1964 Dual Compensation Act, which forces retired regular military officers to give back a portion of their retirement pay if they take a job with the federal government.

Under the dual compensation law, retired officers working during any year as civilians for the government are allowed to keep the first $3,700 in retirement pay. After that the retirees can collect only 50 per cent of their retirement income for the remainder of that year.

Weekly Wall Street

Favorable trends noted by analysts

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — In an atmosphere of confusion and uncertainty about the economic outlook, Wall Street is taking comfort in some strongly favorable trends in corporate dividend payments.

Since late last year companies have been raising their dividends at a record-setting pace, and a number of analysts say more of the same can be expected in the months ahead.

Another plus for the stock market outlook, many argue, is a steady shrinking of the gap between yields on bonds and stocks, which compete with each other for investors' favor.

"While interest on bonds currently provides a greater yield than dividends on stock, the differential has been narrowing for some time," Standard & Poor's Corp. observed.

"This development is due to the combination of a rise in stock yields for most of the period since early 1976 — as prices drifted while dividends trended strongly upward — and a decline in bond yields for the better part of two years."

By the calculations of investment advisor Ian McAvity, the bond-stock yield spread contracted from 4.69 percentage points early in 1976 to 2.85 approaching mid-1977.

In theory, that means that investment money that might have gone into bonds a year ago now would be more likely to be channeled into stocks, putting a prop under the stock market.

And a prop is something the market could use. With a 4.66 decline to 907.99 this past week, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials sagged back close to the 16-month low of 898.66 it reached at the end of May.

S&P's 500-stock index gave up .31 to 99.79, and the New York Stock Exchange's composite index of all its listed common stocks lost .11 to 54.81.

NYSE volume averaged 20.91 million shares a day over the four-session week, against 19.82 million the week before.

And, notes First Albany Corp., a brokerage firm based in New York's state capital, "corporate recognition of the importance of dividend increases is increasing.

The firm notes that first-quarter dividends paid by the 30 companies in the Dow Jones industrial average were up 13 per cent from a year earlier.

Despite that rate of increase, the firm observes, the so-called payout ratio — the percentage of earnings earmarked for dividends — remains at a low level by historic standards.

First Albany calculated that the average payout ratio among the Dow companies in the 1950s and '60s was 61.57 per cent. In the '70s, it has averaged 45.92 per cent, and last year it was 42.80.

"If the DJ companies paid out 61.57 per cent of their estimated earnings this year, thereby equaling the average payout for 1951-70, the dividend would be $64.91 and the yield at current market levels would be 7.1 per cent," the firm said.

"This won't happen all at once. But over the next few years, we see a rising payout of rising earnings, compounding the rate of dividend growth.

"It may well be that, based on the anticipated yield of future dividends, the gap between stock yields and bond yields has already been effectively closed.

"In other words, the reasonably anticipated dividend several years out, measured against current prices, may already provide a return which equals or exceeds present yields on high-grade long term bonds."

Clausen: corporations must be more 'open and frank'

LOS ANGELES — (BW) — U.S. corporations and boards of directors must be open and frank about their methods of operations if they are to preserve the public's understanding and goodwill, A.W. Clausen, president of BankAmerica Corp., said.

Addressing the 1977 National Conference of the American Society of Corporate Secretaries, Clausen said business is a "vital agent of change and a leading beneficiary of change."

But, he said, "we must accept the fact that an important test of our performance . . . is the sensitivity with which the corporation has adapted to societal changes — and the degree to which it has either facilitated or obstructed the process.

"The only realistic response to public curiosity about our affairs is candor and forthrightness — in a word, disclosure."

Clausen pointed to Bank America's Voluntary Disclosure Code, made public last November and containing 70 separate categories of information, and remarked, "It hasn't hurt a bit." He added, "This approach is a far more powerful deterrent to wrongdoing than a code of conduct.

"Our code recognizes the merging concern over corporate governance and the special importance of our board of directors in that process."

Clausen outlined several steps that corporations can take to improve the effectiveness of their boards of directors.

To counter criticism alleging that corporate boards are "perceived as remote, insensitive and not adequately reflective of the publics they serve," Clausen suggested that corporations observe five postulates relating to boards of directors:

—To assure good corporate governance, business must attract outside directors who can play important roles in the development of policy, including the anticipation of the impact of policies on the public.

"The board," Clausen said, "must enjoy a healthy relationship with management to assure that management addresses corporate problems in an open and candid manner, within the law."

So-called public or special interest directors would not provide the panacea suggested by critics, he added. "Each director must bring his or her expertise to bear on corporate problems on behalf of all shareowners."

—A clear majority of any board should consist of strong outside directors.

—A strong board committee system is the foundation of a successful board and a successful corporate decision-making process. Clausen emphasized that the audit, public policy, nominating and management compensation committees should consist primarily of outside directors.

—Each director must devote adequate time to discharge an expanding number of duties set by law. Directors, Clausen said, should be prepared to accept public scrutiny of their record of attendance at board and committee meetings.

—Compensation of outside directors should be reviewed. "The increased level of activity demanded of corporate directors today requires the recognition that their compensation should bear a more direct relationship to their responsibilities," Clausen said.

Referring to what is popularly called "shareholder democracy," Clausen said corporate governance depends on the principle that one stockholder is entitled to as many votes as he or she chooses to buy in the form of shares of a company.

"Proposals to change the proxy machinery for shareholder participation in corporate governance should keep very clearly in mind what that machinery is supposed to accomplish — efficient corporate management," Clausen said.

"The machinery is not intended to assure governance by shareholder vote."

He added that its effectiveness would be destroyed if the proxy machanism were used as a communications vehicle on a shareholder-to-shareholder level.

Clausen also urged business to speak forcefully in stating its case on vital issues "to assure the public's perception that the public does benefit from a strong and competitive free enterprise system."

Clausen continued, "No public relations effort . . . will attain this crucial objective, absent strong directors and corporate executives who are determined to obey the law and show their sympathetic understanding of the relationship of corporate activity to the nation's general welfare."

Downey-Ontario merger slated

Downey Savings and Loan Association disclosed plans today to buy up the $55 million Ontario Savings and Loan Association.

Both financial institutions have filed letters of intent with state and federal agencies declaring that they reached an agreement in principle for the merger.

The local branches are at 8746 Base Line Rd., in Alta Loma; 1285 Central Ave., in Chino; and 333 N. Euclid Ave., in Ontario. There also are offices in Yucaipa and Colton.

Polly's Pointers

DEAR POLLY — With a 3-year-old and a 3-month-old, I do have a lot of wash. Instead of pouring out liquid detergents or those expensive sprays for laundry stains, I rinse out an empty shoe polish bottle with an applicator that has a sponge tip. I fill the clean bottle with detergent and rub it on the bad stains. This saves time and detergent. — SUE.

© 1977 by NEA, Inc.

DEAR POLLY — When cleaning wood and there are tight places you cannot get to, spray a little of the furniture cleaner on a cotton swab and it will get the tight spots. — L.A.S.

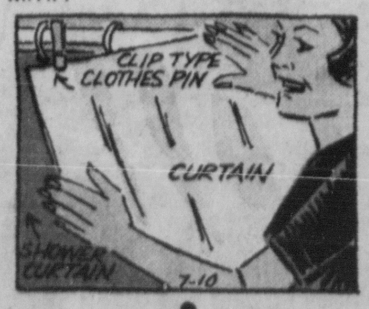
Send your helpful hints to Polly's Pointers in care of this newspaper.

DEAR POLLY — Here is an improved way to make candy cane cookies. The recipe we have reads "Place strips side by side, press gently together and twist like a rope." We have found it easier to place the strips close together and to roll them together. The cookies tend to roll easier, look smoother and do not fall apart so easily. Also, one may add some peppermint extract instead of crushed peppermint candy to add more flavor and make them look more like candy canes. — K.L.

DEAR POLLY — A handy-dandy substitute for a yardstick, ruler or tape is a dollar bill, as it is slightly over six inches long. This works well for approximate measurements. — JANET.

DEAR POLLY — After using the outdoor grill, remove the rack, turn it upside down in the grass and leave all night. The dew will loosen the burned-on residue and it is easily washed off in the morning. — RUTH S.

DEAR POLLY — To keep curtains from wrinkling between ironing and hanging, I now open my shower curtain and clip two clip-type clothespins to the curtain. As each piece is ironed I attach it to a clothespin at each end. All the curtains for a room can be ironed without stopping to hang them individually. Even when ironing just one pair, this is helpful for holding one side while you iron the other. — M.T.F.



DEAR POLLY — To extend the life of a coat lining along the sleeve edge, close your hand as you put on the coat, as fingernails are very hard on the lining. — DOROTHY.

DEAR POLLY — When ready to cook canned green beans I alway s wash them before cooking so as to remove that "can" taste. — ERNESTINE.

DEAR POLLY — When you find lint or fuzz on blouses use an electric razor brush to remove the lint. Works perfectly. — MRS. V.J.

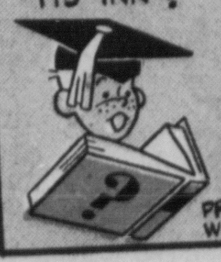
THIS WEEK'S TOP PRIZE QUESTION:

SCOTT WARD OF BURKE, SD, ASKS:

"WHY DOES AN OCTOPUS SQUIRT ITS INK?"



AN OCTOPUS SQUIRTS ITS INK TO ESCAPE ENEMIES. IT STORES ITS INKY FLUID IN A SPECIAL SAC INSIDE ITS BODY. WHEN A SHARK OR OTHER ENEMY COMES NEAR, THE OCTOPUS SQUIRTS ITS INK. THE INKY FLUID FORMS A DARK CLOUD IN THE WATER THAT DULLS THE ENEMY'S SENSE OF SMELL AND HELPS HIDE THE OCTOPUS LONG ENOUGH FOR IT TO ESCAPE.

PHYSICIANS MUTUAL 75 Years 1902 1977 INSURANCE COMPANY

Dear Friend:

I am a doctor as well as Chairman of the Board of Physicians Mutual Insurance Company. And over the years of my practice, I have seen many cases where a good supplemental hospital policy could have eased the financial strain on the families of hospitalized patients.

That's why I wanted to call your attention to a brand new policy we've developed here at Physicians -- a policy that pays equal benefits of $40.00 a day -- $1,200.00 a month for you, your wife and all of your children from the very first day you're hospitalized for a covered accident or illness.

You'll find all the details in this booklet. So why not read it over now. It could be something you'll want for yourself and your family.

Sincerely,

Herbert H. Davis, M.D.

Chairman of the Board

P.S. I'm especially happy to recommend this policy during our 75th Anniversary year. I sincerely believe it's the finest we've ever offered.

Dr. Davis is right. An average stay in the hospital—8 days—can cost you a small fortune today. And that's not even counting the doctor . . . medicine . . . plus all the other bills that you still have to face whether you're sick or not—food, electricity, house payment.

The plain truth is that you could use $1,200.00 a month ($40.00 a day) to help you pay your bills when you go to the hospital.

And that's what this policy is all about. Created to meet the very problem you face, whenever you're hospitalized for a covered sickness or accident.

Here's What This Policy Does For You . . .

You'll collect $1,200.00 a month ($40.00 a day) for any covered sickness or accident beginning the very first day you are hospitalized. Protect yourself, your wife or your whole family. $40.00-a-day equal benefits for all. Just pick the plan that meets your needs.

Pays you double benefits $4,800.00 a month ($160.00 a day) for you and your wife!

Yes, that's a lot of money. But you'd need it. So under the Husband-Wife or All-Family Plan, you'll collect $4,800.00 a month ($160.00 a day) if you and your spouse are both injured and hospitalized at the same time—by the same or by different accidents.

You'll collect full benefits—$40.00 a day—for hospitalization due to pregnancy or any pregnancy complication if your policy has been in force for 10 months or more. There's no added cost to you!

Important!

All cash benefits are not taxable, according to Internal Revenue Service rulings.

Remember—accidents and new sicknesses are covered immediately—the very day your policy is issued. You collect the first day and every day you're hospitalized for a covered sickness or accident.

There's no limit on the number of days for which you can collect cash benefits. You can be hospitalized as often as necessary and stay as long as you have to—knowing that your $40.00-a-day benefits cannot run out. Our plan will pay you benefits for as long as you're hospitalized—EVEN FOR LIFE!

Pays cash benefits in addition to any other insurance you have.

Remember, this is extra, supplemental protection. Your benefits are paid over and above any other insurance you may carry—including Blue Cross/Blue Shield, Major Medical and Medicare. This policy is designed to help you make up the difference between your total hospital bill and what your other insurance will pay.

You will not be turned down because of your age, health or size of your family.

As soon as we receive your Application, we will issue your policy (P350 Series) and put it in force. From that day on—even before you receive your policy in the mail—you're covered for new sicknesses and accidents. Naturally, we can issue only one policy to you on a guaranteed issue basis.

If you're already a Physicians Mutual policyowner and would like information about additional coverage available to you, please write for details.

You can apply for this new Physicians Mutual Hospital Policy by simply filling out the short Application attached and mailing it together with $1—which pays for your first month.

Physicians Mutual Insurance Company
HOSPITAL CONFINEMENT INDEMNITY
OUTLINE OF COVERAGE

Hospital Benefits

1. Option A pays $1,200.00 a month ($40.00 a day) when you or any insured family member is hospitalized for a covered sickness or accident.

Option B pays $900.00 a month ($30.00 a day) when you or any insured family member is hospitalized for a covered sickness or accident.

2. Option A pays $4,800.00 a month ($160.00 a day) for each of you if both husband and wife are insured and hospitalized at the same time due to accident.

Option B pays $3,600.00 a month ($120.00 a day) for each of you if both husband and wife are insured and hospitalized at the same time due to accident.

Maternity Coverage

Pays the full daily hospital benefit of the option you select if both you and your spouse are insured and childbirth or any consequence thereof occurs more than 10 months after the effective date of the policy.

Renewability of the Policy: Your policy is guaranteed renewable for as long as you live and pay your premiums when due. Your premiums can never be increased unless premiums are increased on all policies like yours in your state.

Half-benefits are paid for up to 4 weeks when hospital confinement is due to mental disorder. You are eligible to receive half-benefits again if hospitalized for the same condition after resuming normal activities for 6 months.

Exclusions: Not covered is hospitalization due to alcoholism, drug addiction or any condition covered by Workmen's Compensation or Employers' Liability Law benefits. Confinement in convalescent, extended-care or self-care units of hospitals, in nursing homes and in U.S. Government hospitals, where there is no room and board charge for which payment is legally required in the absence of insurance, is not covered.

A condition for which you received medical treatment or advice, or which was manifested prior to the effective date of your policy will not be covered for one year after the policy is in force.

When you are 65, you'll find help for hospital care in many forms—Medicare, Social Security, special agencies, and perhaps a pension plan. But because people in this age group go to the hospital more often, this extra help is frequently not enough.

In addition to Medicare, you'll be receiving cash benefits from Physicians Mutual . . . to fill the financial void created by your illness. During the first 60 days of hospitalization — when Medicare coverage is highest — you collect half benefits, $20.00 a day.

After 60 days of hospital care—when Medicare coverage reduces and you need help most—your cash benefits go up to $40.00 a day. And stay there no matter how long the hospital visit!

We've found that most folks over 65 prefer this approach . . . because your monthly premiums do not increase after you turn 65.

You Should Know

We will send you your Physicians Mutual Hospital Policy by mail. When you receive it, read it through. You will see that it is honest, easy to read and understand. If for any reason you decide that you do not want this protection, you may return the policy within 10 days and we will promptly refund your dollar.

Herbert N. Davis, M.D.

Chairman, Board of Directors

From its founding in 1902 until 1962, the Company specialized in health insurance for physicians, surgeons and dentists only. Then, recognizing the growing need for extra protection from rising hospital costs, we began offering supplemental insurance to the general public. Today, our various policies protect over a million Americans in all walks of life.

Headquartered in Omaha . . . licensed in 49 states and the District of Columbia, Physicians Mutual is proud of its record of service. Last year alone, we paid claims totaling over $50,000,000 on all policies. That's a return of over 70% of premiums paid in benefits to policyowners—one of the highest in the entire insurance industry.

DOCUMENT HOLDER—YOURS TO KEEP! This rugged handsome vinyl document holder is yours even if you decide you don't want to keep the policy. It's a convenient and easy way to file your important papers in one safe place.

Monty Hall has made a new "deal" for his own new television game show. It's called It's Anybody's Guess and Monty's guess is that it will be around for a long time. It airs on NBC, Monday thru Friday at 11AM.

Getting a game show on the air isn't a matter of guess-work according to Monty. "You have to have the right ingredients," he said. "First of all, there has to be a game. You must have a winner and a loser and you must involve your viewers subjectively."

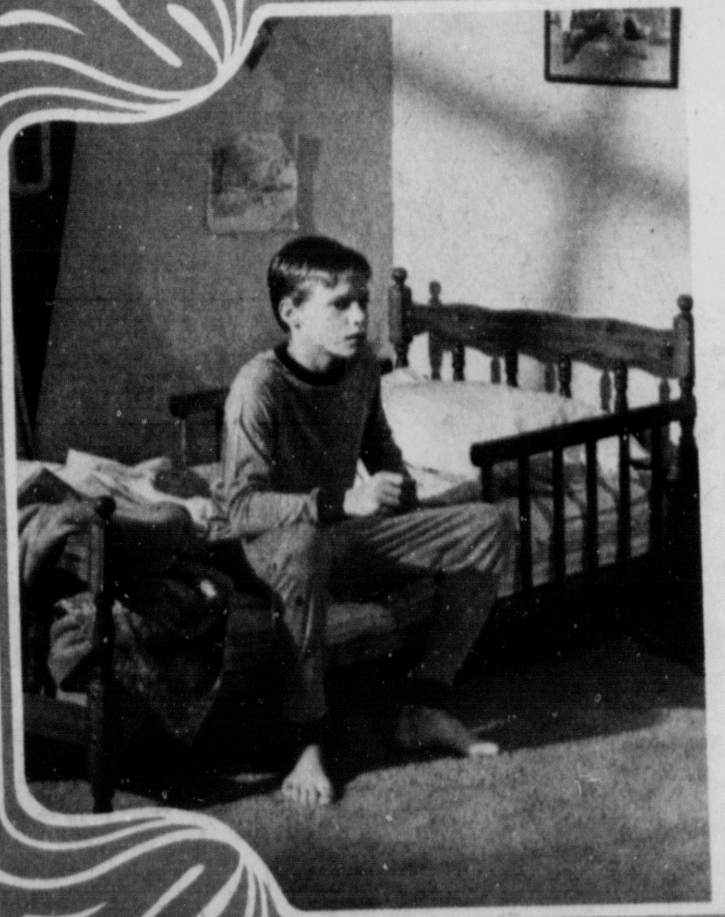
Viewers participate in one of two ways, according to Hall.

"If the questions are easy, they will think or say, 'I know the answer, I'm as smart as the contestants on the show,'" said Hall.

"If the questions are tough, then the viewer becomes fascinated by the contestants and start rooting for one or the other side, as in a sporting event.

"With a TV series, such as Police Woman, the outcome is seldom in doubt. With a game show, like a sporting event, the outcome is always in doubt. You never know who will win."

It's Anybody's Guess is a word game. It's based on whether people can predict what other people would say. There are two contestants and five panelists, all picked from a studio audience.



Lance Kerwin stars as a 13-year-old who must cope with personal shame and the angry accusations of his parents over his chronic bed-wetting, in "The Loneliest Runner," a 90-minute drama repeating on NBC, Thursday at 8PM. Brian Keith also stars.

Michael Landon (of NBC's Little House on the Prairie) appears in a cameo role in the film, which he wrote and directed.

John Curtis is a loner because he wants to conceal the fact from his friends that his parents won't buy him a regular bed until he stops wetting. He refuses to stay overnight with friends for fear he will shame himself.

His sympathetic father, Arnold, is not strong enough to stand up to his demanding mother, Alice, who intimidates the youth by hanging his soiled sheets out the window for his friends to see.

Ironically, it is John's shame that eventually results in his becoming a hero. Melissa Sue Anderson, who also appears on Little House on the Prairie, portrays Nancy Rizzi, young John's girlfriend.

CLOSE-UP

STILL ANOTHER SIDE

CBS star Jack Lord, of Hawaii Five-O (Thursdays, 9PM), is a man with a one-track mind during the show's filming season, which extends from about April until December each year and takes place entirely in Hawaii, where Lord lives as well as works. True enough, Lord has his leisure-time pursuits, notably painting, for which he is well known, and exceedingly creative photography and jewelry-designing and making, for which he is not well known. But he restricts these activities mainly to those relaxed, "off-duty" months of late winter and early spring.

For the rest of the year, during which Lord acts, directs a bit and keeps a keen supervisory eye on all aspects of the Hawaii phase of Hawaii Five-O production, the star leads a spartan existence, rising at 5AM six mornings a week, going for a jog along the beach, then devoting the rest of each long workday to the television series. Yet even during these grueling months there is one non-production interest that he pursues faithfully—his frequent visits to patients at the vast Tripler Army Medical Center in Honolulu.

At such times Lord wanders easily from bed to bed, chatting with their occupants, responding to requests for autographs and posing with the patients for snapshots, giving the impression of a guy who has all the time in the world to spare.

Lord's interest in the patients at Tripler becomes most concentrated during the annual date of "The National Salute to Hospitalized Veterans," a project sponsored cooperatively by No Greater Love, a non-profit organization concerned with veterans' welfare, and the Veterans Administration Hospitals.

By contributing his time, energy and prestige to the program, Lord, a past member of the National Advisory Council of No Greater Love, has had a key part in making the Tripler observance of "The National Salute to Hospitalized Veterans" the largest anywhere in the country for four consecutive years.

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR RONA JAFFE, author of The Last Chance

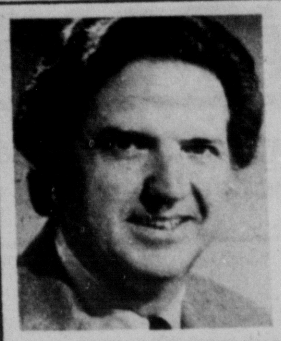
I recently saw you on a talk show and noticed a change in hairdo. Are you copying Barbra Streisand's in A Star Is Born? —Helen Burry, Chicago, Ill.

● No. A few months ago I was going through some old snapshot albums and found a picture of myself taken in 1958 when I wrote my first book, The Best of Everything. I had a head full of frizz (maybe Barbra saw that picture and is copying me) and thought it would be fun to wear my hair like that again.



VINCENT L. TOFANY, president, National Safety Council

● Like most recreational sports, it has risks. There are an estimated 170 fatalities annually associated with it. However, those who follow safe-diving practices can enjoy many years of scuba fun. It's essential that all divers successfully complete a recognized certification course before any scuba outings are attempted. Skill development, equipment selection, mental preparedness and physical conditioning must be practiced under a certified instructor.

FOR LEE MAJORS, star of The Six Million Dollar Man

Are bionic men and women possible in the near future? —Lynn Anthony Oliver, San Antonio, Texas

● Bionics are definitely with us now — the heart pacemaker is a fine example of the merging of biology and electronics. But scientists agree a truly artificial human being is probably impossible. No computer could ever copy the intelligence of the human brain; no factory could ever assemble even a small portion of the human body's billions of cells; and no surgical skill could master the transplantations of every human organ.

FOR PHOEBE SNOW, recording star

How old were you when you had your first guitar lesson? —S.T., Cumberland, Md.

● Fifteen. The guitar, though, wasn't my first instrument. I started out on the piano, around 6, and — like most kids — hated it. I muddled along until my 15th birthday, when I decided once and for all the piano wasn't getting me anywhere. Also, I'd fallen madly in love with a guitar teacher. Like my piano lessons, that didn't get anywhere, either.

FOR MARGARET MEAD, anthropologist

What happened to make you realize anthropology was your vocation? —M.S., Rapid City, S.D.

● I had a choice of becoming a writer, politician or scientist and decided on the latter. Then came the question of what kind of scientist. Because my grandmother and parents had been interested in the human sciences, that is where I looked. Then, when I studied under Prof. Franz Boas, I realized that the tasks of anthropology were something that had to be done at once, while the cultures were unchanged, but most of the problems of psychology and sociology could wait.

FOR BEN VEREEN, star of Roots

● No. Long before the TV series was even thought of, I felt a compulsion to find my own but never did. All I know is that my great-grandmother was a freed slave, and she moved to Chadbourn, N.C., which is now the family H.Q. Vereen is a rare name. Even stranger is the fact there's a white plantation owner in the area called Vereen. I'm now combing the archives, helped by the best researcher I know — Alex Haley.

FOR RICHARD PETTY, stock-car racer

Did you encounter any parental objections when you went into racing because of the safety factor? —A.S., Chattanooga, Tenn.

● No. I was brought up in racing, so when I chose it as my career, my parents weren't the least bit surprised. With Daddy [Lee Petty] being a top racing personality, he was proud when I decided to follow in his footsteps. First thing he taught me was if you've tried your best, win or lose, there's satisfaction in whatever you do.

FOR JOSETTE BANZET, of The Other Side of Midnight

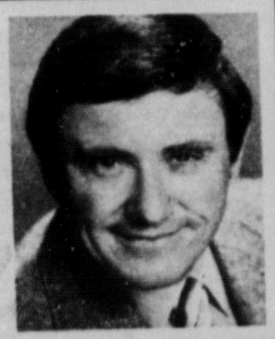
● As you know, I have an accent (a mix of Hungarian-French-Italian-Israeli). I'm used to being told I'm "too French," "too Italian" and so on. During one of the scenes, director Charles Jarrott suggested, "Could you please try to be less American!" I loved it. Meant I'm finally shaking off my past. Nicest thing I've heard in years. Bet that's the first time a criticism was received as a compliment.



FOR THE "ASK THEM YOURSELF" EDITOR

I've never heard Merv Griffin mention his family. What happened to them? —Mabel Arena, Trenton, N.J.

● Merv is divorced but is extremely close to his only child, Tony, 17, who lives with his mother in Los Angeles but usually spends weekends with Merv. Tony has often appeared on his dad's show and, as a result, has been offered screen roles in teen adventure movies on the old beach party theme. Merv nixed all those offers (surprisingly, Tony didn't object). He wants his son to finish school before getting involved with show business.

Do you plan to go into show business? —B.D., Lowell, Mass.

● I'm not interested in acting, if that's what you mean. In the fall, I'll major in radio and TV at Arkansas State University, which is where the scholarship money I won is going. I want to have a news show with guests. I'll try to be another Jane Pauley — I like her style; she's so cheerful and relaxed. But she's also a hard act to follow.

PRO AND CON

Are Our Voluntary Armed Forces Successful?

PRO Harold Brown, Secretary of Defense

The all-volunteer force has been a success so far in meeting the personnel needs of the active forces. Recruitment goals have generally been met. Whether we will be able to maintain a reasonable balance in terms of geographical distribution, education level and so on must be carefully watched. The demographic situation is going to change: there will be fewer 18- and 20-year olds in the 1980's. We also expect an economic upturn that will produce increased competition for the services of young people. Finally, while the all-volunteer force has worked quite well for the active forces, shortages exist in the strength of the reserves.

CON Senator John Tower of Texas, ranking Republican on the Armed Services Committee

The high motivation shown by many of our new recruits is a source of strength that was much less prevalent under the draft. However, we cannot conclude that the all-volunteer force will be able to work over the long term. Recently, we've begun to witness increasingly serious shortages in the strength of both our active forces and of our vital reserve components. Over the past year the percentage of Army recruits who are high school graduates has declined, and that is an indicator of the quality of personnel the services are able to attract. These difficulties will require additional efforts in recruiting, and military recruiting already has become astonishingly expensive.

"FONZIE" THE CURSE THAT PLAGUES HENRY WINKLER

Believe it or not, the guy who plays that supremely "cool" high school dropout is a quiet, introspective loner with a burning desire to be a great actor.

By Peer J. Oppenheimer

The Fonz is inescapable: His face is on everything from T-shirts to lunch pails to panties to...you name it; his program, Happy Days, is at the top of the television ratings; and whenever he makes a public appearance, he's mobbed by adoring fans. Why has all this happened? And just who — and what — is The Fonz? For the answer, you have to go back to October 30, 1946, when Ilse and Harry Winkler, who had settled in New York City after fleeing from the Nazis, became the parents of a boy they named Henry.

For 26 years Henry was known simply as Henry. Then five years ago, something happened: After working in radio and doing commercials, two TV shows for NET and the movie Lords of Flatbush, he came to Hollywood. He had $1,000 in his pocket and intended to stay a month to see what it was like. "I arrived on September 18th, and my agent sent me out for a reading. I did one line, and from the time it took me to drive from his office back to my hotel, I had a job on The Mary Tyler Moore Show. Things just snowballed from there." He ended up in an ABC pilot called Happy Days and Arthur Fonzarelli — Fonzie — was born.

Suddenly Henry wasn't Henry anymore. He was totally eclipsed by the character he (along with director Jerry Paris and executive producer Gary Marshall) had created.

The Fonz literally took over. His thumbs-up gesture became almost as universally accepted as the two-finger V-for-Victory sign of World War II. "I took it from the gladiators," Winkler explained. "If it's good, it's thumbs up; if it's bad, it's thumbs down. This way I reduced entire paragraphs to a motion. And since the character is given so much power, it is a very strong choice."

He made the tough-guy leather jacket a symbol of respectability for nice guys. Grandmothers stood in line for hours just to shake his hand. And women from 6 to 60 found the star — who stands just five feet six — to be a new sex symbol.

The whole Fonzie syndrome blew so out of proportion, in fact, that the person trapped inside Fonzie's skin had no identity of his own. Everyone forgot he really wasn't the "cool" teenage dropout of the 50's from Jefferson High School in Milwaukee that he portrays. Said one article, supposedly quoting the man himself, "I have created a monster."

"That statement was taken out of context," Winkler said on location for the movie Heroes he recently finished making with Sally Field during the series' hiatus. "Let me give it to you straight: It's not that I want to get away from The Fonz image, but I've trained for nine years — at Emerson College, the Yale Drama School and as an apprentice at the Repertory Theater at Yale — to be an actor. The Fonz is only one character inside me."

Winkler is adamant on this point. Several months ago he turned down $100,000 for narrating a film about motorcycling because he didn't want any allusion to the bike-riding Fonzie.

If Winkler's current movie role rids him of Fonzie, it matters little to him. "I have only one more year with the show," he told me. "I don't know if I'll quit then. If it seems that is enough, I'll go. I want a film career. I was in two — The Lords of Flatbush and Crazy Joe. They were practice. This one is my graduation. Heroes stars Henry Winkler."

When he's not doing Happy Days, Winkler certainly does not act or talk like Fonzie. He's articulate, soft-spoken, self-assured and admittedly "very ambitious: I would give up a lot for my career." Yet he possesses a touch of Old World courtesy and charm that turns his arrogance into earnestness and saves his candid self-appraisal from being braggadocio.

Some of Winkler's dates, however, have not found him so charming and have openly called him "boring." That's probably because he is very introspective, and his conversations tend to get philosophical. "I love the fact that human beings think," he said. "I am interested in hearing other people's thoughts, and I don't mind passing mine on. They can take them or leave them. I do not think I am the beginning and the end.

"I was a camp counselor once," he went on. "I love working with children. If I was not an actor, I would be a child psychiatrist. I feel it is almost inevitable that someday I will do something with children."

But marriage is not in Winkler's immediate plans. "When I am able to take full responsibility of myself, then I will get married and take on the responsibility of a family," he said. "There is great strength in marriage. It is an important institution."

He knows exactly what type of woman he is looking for: "One who is open enough to be in love with me and bright enough to have her own life. Then you have two people coming together, and there is something going on. One doesn't sit there waiting for the other."

When he is on the road, Winkler often must have special companions — bodyguards. "Usually the state police have about seven guys who surround me," he commented. "In New Orleans, I was Bacchus in Mardi Gras, and I had more security than the President of the United States.

"I took my parents with me, and I can't tell you how happy I am that I did that," he said. "They were not pleased with my decision to be an actor, but we were in my hotel room the morning after the parade, and one million people were down in the street, holding up signs, giving of themselves, saying, 'Henry Winkler, we like you.' You see, I can tell it is working because out of the thousands of signs, only two were to Fonzie. Anyway, the energy was overwhelming. My parents started crying. For the first time they understood what it is that I'm doing."

Winkler recently got a request to speak about drugs and excessive use of alcohol for a Senate subcommittee. "I guess at this moment in my life, people listen to me," he explained. Basically what I said was you must have self-respect and not destroy yourself. You cannot rearrange your consciousness before you get a consciousness. You can never meet your wish if you are a slave.

"I do not drink alcohol. I don't like it in my body. I am under its control until it lets me go. I do not deny others, but excessive alcohol for anyone is outrageous."

His charisma — as Fonzie — has reached around the world. Last December, for instance, he went on his first vacation in eight years. "I spent two weeks on Bora Bora, and a 55-year-old woman came running out of a thatched hut, saying, 'Mr. Winkler, I am from Scotland and just came from Japan where the last thing I saw was your special.'" In Papeete he met a local Tahitian wearing a Fonzie T-shirt. "In the States I see this all the time, and I think, 'That's nice,' but when I saw him, I thought, 'Wow! Look at that!'"

The greatest compliments, he believes, come from peers. "I took my niece to see George C. Scott in Sly Fox in New York. When we started to leave, a man came up and said, 'Mr. Scott would like to see you.' When I walked into his dressing room, he looked up and said, 'The Fonz. I watch you all the time.' I nearly dropped dead. Then later I learned he'd given a lecture and said that I did the part very well and that everyone in the business wishes me well in showing that I can do other stuff. When I hear compliments like that, when the best says you are good, I really feel Henry Winkler has arrived."

THE GREAT ANCESTOR HUNT

Illustration by Jacqueline Adato

Whether they were rogues or royalty, discovering your forebears can be a thrilling expedition — and you even may find you're related to some friends.

By Harriet Van Horne

Once upon a time, genealogy was considered the province of dotty old ladies bent on establishing kinship with the Lees of Virginia or with the lost Dauphin of France. Everyone else, content simply to be in the melting pot, was too busy looking forward ever to look back.

Today, astonishingly, genealogy is the third-ranking American hobby. And it's being pursued with typically American avidity. Climbing the family tree rates right after stamp-and coin-collecting. Libraries, town halls and old cemeteries are under virtual siege by the new breed of genealogists. A recent Gallup poll showed 69 percent of us are eager to know more about our ancestors. As social changes go, this one is unprecedented; a mere decade ago it was bad form even to mention one's ancestors.

But all that was before the Bicentennial, which reminded us that we are all descended from immigrants, whether they landed on Ellis Island or Plymouth Rock. It was also before Alex Haley made his historic journey to West Africa in search of his great-great-great-great grandfather, Kunta Kinte. How this free-born grandsire was kidnapped by slave traders, and how his harrowing tale was passed on to his progeny, made Roots a runaway best seller.

But the success of the book was nothing compared with the impact of the television production. More than 100 million Americans watched the series, making it the most popular TV event in history. Almost overnight, ancestor-hunting became the American craze. In the bloody saga of Haley's past, 20 million blacks saw their own past. In Haley's pride at finding himself to be a link in a chain leading back to a high African culture, millions of white Americans saw fulfillment of a hunger they had learned to put down with such jests as, "All I can say about my ancestors is that they're dead."

So the Great Ancestor Hunt is now in full cry. Genealogy departments of public libraries are literally turning away people with notebooks and file cards who have come — uncertain of procedure — to "look up the family tree." Old census books, military histories, deeds to farmland, grants of arms, ships' passenger lists — all are avidly sought.

The National Archives in Washington reports that the crowds lining up there are becoming too large to handle. Visitors often are asked to come back another day when there is chair space and room to study one of the 50,000 published genealogies or to view the miles of microfilm now available.

Evidence of the average American's new mania to establish roots is borne out in other statistics. Currently, more than 1,000 publications are offering hints to ancestor hunters. Boy Scouts can now qualify for merit badges in genealogy, and thousands have done so.

For Americans with no notion of how to begin the ancestor hunt, there are half a dozen new reference guides. One of the most practical is How to Trace Your Family Tree ($1.95, Doubleday), which was assembled by the staff of the American Genealogical Research Institute. The opening chapter answers the query so many Americans put to librarians and archivists: "How far back can we go?" For most people, even members of long-prominent families who engage professional researchers, going further back than 1500 is almost impossible. Prior to that, records were kept only for royal families and aristocratic heroes. The national origin of an ancestor seeker may define the limits of his hunt. A citizen of Middle Eastern or Levantine extraction may go back to the seventh or eighth century, and one whose roots are in India or in the Israel-Palestine area may go back 1,000 years or more.

In Finding Our Fathers: A Guidebook to Jewish Genealogy (Random House), author Dan Rottenberg tells of Semitic families who trace their lineage back to King Solomon or to David and Bathsheba.

Jews, Rottenberg believes, can trace their ancestry more easily than other Americans. He reasons that "there were never more than 17 million Jews at one time," and that "most Jews are related to one another somewhere in the past, however distant."

Genealogy, Rottenberg goes on to say, "is simply history on a personal scale." For example, the bomb that killed Tsar Alexander II in 1881 led to the Russian pogroms and to cruel anti-Semitic laws that caused thousands to flee Russia for the United States.

Similarly, the persecution of the Pilgrims in the 17th century brought the Mayflower to Plymouth, Mass. And had the English Cavaliers not been routed by Oliver Cromwell, the State of Virginia today would not boast so many families with long aristocratic pedigrees.

There is something "comforting" about finding the roots of one's family, Rottenberg adds. "It teaches us that we are all brothers and sisters, and that whatever harm we do to one another we do to ourselves."

In searching for your roots, keep the path of inquiry in a direct line — parents, grandparents, great grandparents and so on. Forget cousins and uncles at the outset. If you bear in mind that each of us has four grandparents, eight great-grandparents, 16 great-greats and so on, you will see the virtue in ignoring collateral branches and irrelevant twigs. The numbers become unmanageable. If you figure 25 years to a generation, each of us had a million ancestors, direct and collateral, walking the earth in the 15th century.

In all family trees, some names pop up repeatedly, showing a recurrent genetic strain. Intermarriage among kith and kin was not uncommon. Thus, as you go back in time you may discover that some of your contemporaries are your fourth or fifth cousins. This is particularly true among Jewish families and accounts for the strong family resemblance among strangers.

Not surprisingly, the great ancestor hunt has stimulated a new interest in "ethnicity," the background of families whose American roots are only two or three generations old.

Colleges report a surge of interest in ethnic-language study. Between 1968 and 1975 there was a 35-percent decline in the study of both French and German. During the same period, enrollment in Swedish, Yiddish, Hebrew, Italian, Polish, Norwegian and Japanese doubled.

The American Library Association told the Christian Science Monitor that "the rebirth in ethnic interest is making extraordinary demands on libraries for materials." Novels and poetry in the so-called ethnic languages are in great demand.

Prominent persons whose ancestry was never explored in past years now find themselves under genealogic scrutiny. The British looked into President Carter's roots and proclaimed him to be the direct descendant of a John Carter who headed the Royal Company of Vitners in the 17th century and who emigrated to Virginia.

A recent story out of Belfast claimed Carter as one of Northern Ireland's progeny. Twelve U.S. Presidents, the Ulstermen assert, had their roots in that dark and bloody ground (besides Carter, Andrew Johnson, Jackson, William and Benjamin Harrison, Cleveland, Arthur, McKinley, Buchanan, Wilson, Polk and Grant).

Is the quest for roots a mere fad, likely to pass away in the manner of other fads? Sociologists say no. The American lifestyle has bred a hunger to know who we are and where we came from. Americans move too often, marry and divorce too frequently and grow up ignorant of our history and traditions.

I well remember my first reading, as a child, of the dog-eared volume, bound in dark red calf, titled, Our Kindred-The Van Horne Family in America Since 1634. There were some rich character sketches, some Indian lore, a few famous names, accounts of estates bought and sold and a precise record of births and deaths. Family wills, military records — especially those from the Revolutionary War — all had exactly the effect Dan Rottenberg mentions: "The humbling realization that each of us is merely a link in a chain. We may someday be forgotten, but the contribution we made to the chain, however slight, will always be there, and as long as the chain exists, a piece of us will exist, too."

With all the controversy about smoking going on, lots of smokers are deciding to switch to low-tar cigarettes.

Well, here's an easy guide to follow.

First, there are those so-called new cigarettes claiming scientific breakthrough and hyped-up flavor. Unfortunately there's nothing very revolutionary about the way they taste.

Next there are those brands that promise nothing but low-tar numbers. They're fine if low numbers are all you want. Because their scientific filters work so well, they filter out most of the taste.

Fortunately there is an alternative. Vantage. The low-tar cigarette that's different from all the others.

From the very beginning Vantage was designed to deliver flavor like a full-flavor cigarette with less tar than 95% of all cigarettes. So forget all those empty promises and go with the real flavor of Vantage.

It will probably turn out to be the only low-tar cigarette you'll enjoy.

BASIC METHOD FOR MAKING GELATIN SALADS

Dissolve 1 package (3 oz.) gelatin and the salt in 1 cup boiling water. Add cold liquid and vinegar or lemon juice. Chill until thickened, about 1 hour. Fold in prepared vegetable or fruit. Chill until firm in a 3- or 4-cup mold, individual molds or square pan. Unmold and serve with lettuce and mayonnaise, if desired. Makes about 3 cups or 6 servings.

MARILYN HANSEN TALKS WITH DOROTHY HOLLAND

Dorothy Holland

One charming, knowledgeable lady in the food forefront is Dorothy Holland, a consumer relations expert for a leading food manufacturer. We talked to Dorothy about salad-making.

"I feel that the big thing in the salad area is the wide variety of better produce that is available," Dorothy said. "We have always had a variety, but now there is definitely more. Better greens and different kinds are being grown and marketed more widely.

"This enables you to individualize more, to combine what you want in your own way. After you have chosen, chilled and arranged your salad, match the dressing with the salad. Select the right dressing to give just the master touch that makes a good salad great.

"Just take a look at the salad dressing aisle in your supermarket. There is an amazing variety. In today's market, unless products really sold, they wouldn't be there, so the variety and choice exist because of consumer demand."

One salad that is a trend setter this year, Dorothy believes, is the "layered salad." Different greens and vegetables are layered in a large bowl and sealed with a layer of mayonnaise. The bowl is then covered with plastic film and refrigerated for several hours or overnight.

At serving time, the surface of the mayonnaise may be decorated with such items as croutons, egg slices, green pepper rings, sliced carrots and radishes. (You also may want to include chilled shrimp, flaked tuna or strips of ham or luncheon meat.) The salad looks pretty on a buffet table, and people love to dig down deep into it.

Another way to prepare the salad is to toss it several hours before serving, cover and then refrigerate.

"Today's homemaker wants to do things ahead of time," Dorothy observed, "and this layered salad is just great for that. Fresh spinach is terrific in the dish, and the layered effect can be spectacular when done in a lovely glass bowl. We did it on television with red onions, green pepper, red radishes and green peas. It's really artistry in a glass bowl."

CHICKEN CURRY LAYERED SALAD

6 cups shredded lettuce
2 pkgs. (10-oz. size) frozen peas, cooked, drained and chilled
3 cups chopped cooked chicken or turkey
3 cups chopped tomatoes
2 cups seeded cucumber slices, halved
3 cups mayonnaise
1 tablespoon sugar
1½ teaspoons curry powder
3 cups croutons

1. Layer lettuce, peas, chicken, tomatoes and cucumber in 5-qt. salad bowl.

2. Combine mayonnaise, sugar and curry; mix well. Spread over salad. Cover with plastic film; refrigerate overnight.

3. Before serving, sprinkle with croutons. Makes 12 servings

MARILYN HANSEN TALKS WITH NIKA HAZELTON

Books and Cooks

We recently talked to Nika Hazelton about her latest book, The Unabridged Vegetable Cookbook. It won first prize in the specialty category in the R.T. French Company Tastemaker Awards competition in May of this year.

Nika, what prompted you to write a vegetable cookbook?

I have always liked vegetables more than any other kind of food. And so it was a natural development to write a vegetable cookbook, as I have been collecting vegetable recipes for 35 years.

Prize-winning cookbook author Nika Hazelton.

I've noticed that the recipes have many different seasoning variations. Is that a result of a foreign background?

Yes, I grew up in Italy, Switzerland and England. My father was a German diplomat and my mother was Italian. I was not a difficult child with regard to food, and I ate everything. So very early I developed a sense for the taste of good food.

My mother, who originally was an entertainer, was very interested in cooking and, in fact, wrote an Italian cookbook for Germans. She was way ahead of her time.

I came to this country in the late 30's to work for Fortune magazine. I worked there seven years, then went to Harper's Bazaar. Later I worked as a copywriter at Benton and Bowles advertising agency.

One day I was traveling on a train, and, just to see if I could write something other than advertising copy, I started to write down daily childhood reminiscences. I guess I proved it to myself, for I've been writing ever since.

My cookbook, I Cook As I Please, won the award in 1975 in the basic category. My new vegetable cookbook was written, as I have said, with a great deal of love. I had many more notes on the historical background of each vegetable than the publishers decided I could use.

Well, vegetables should be served crisp and fresh and not be overcooked. Vegetable casseroles, too, should not be overcooked.

In The Unabridged Vegetable Cookbook, I emphasize recipes for the vegetables we eat all the time — potatoes, corn, green beans and so on — so as to get more variety for daily meals.

MARILYN HANSEN INTERVIEWS RUTH CONRAD BATEMAN

Two popular vegetables for home gardens are zucchini and carrots, so when we heard about The Zucchini and Carrot Cookbook, we made haste to find it.

The soft-cover book is written by Ruth Conrad Bateman, who also has written Fifty Great Buffet Parties and The I Love To Cook Book. (We found out when we talked to Ruth that Peg Bracken, who wrote The I Hate To Cook Book, is one of her best friends.)

We asked Ruth why she decided to write a cookbook devoted solely to zucchini and carrots. "Because they're always available, never out of season," she replied, "and they are reasonable, never priced too high, and, what's more, they taste good and are good for you."

In the opening chapter, Ruth describes the quick ways of cooking zucchini and carrots, and in chapter three gives a recipe that she says "has really caught on, and just about everybody is making it. I must say I originated it." The recipe is Zucchini Green Chile Quiche, which can be baked in a large pan as directed or in little tart pans for appetizers.

The Tropical Carrot Cake is her favorite carrot-cake recipe. It contains crushed pineapple and coconut, with a pineapple, orange peel and coconut frosting.

Ruth has recently moved with her husband to San Juan Capistrano, Calif., a little village with tile roofs that is the oldest community in Orange County.

Ruth has lived in California since graduating from college. She grew up in the "short grass" country in Oklahoma — near Texas. It was a disputed community, as both states claimed the land. The controversy was settled by a legal decree, and residents are content to be Oklahomans.

Ruth's family is originally from Tennessee and South Carolina, and so the Conrad table was amply filled with her mother's Southern specialties, especially banana cake and pecan pie.

"Through the years," Ruth told us, "I have stayed in love with food." She wants everyone to know how great cooking is and hopes to inspire young people. "I feel that the new generation is interested in lighter, fresher foods without much emphasis on heavy sauces."

CONDENSED MILK: A HANDY EMERGENCY FOOD

When the refrigerator fails or getting to the store is impossible, a can of sweetened condensed milk is useful to have on the shelf. Sweetened condensed milk has sugar added when the milk is processed and is different from canned evaporated milk in color, flavor and texture.

A can of sweetened condensed milk can be kept on the shelf for 18 months after it is processed. Once the can is opened, it should be covered with foil and refrigerated. The milk should be used within 10 days.

An easy and delicious party pie that uses condensed milk is the recipe for Coconut Lime Pie.

I was talking to my friend, Anita Mizner, of New Rochelle, N.Y., while preparing this issue, and she wanted to share her recipe for Eggplant Casserole, which follows.

ANITA'S EGGPLANT CASSEROLE

Take an eggplant (1½ lbs.) and peel and slice it. Place slices on cookie sheet, sprinkle with a little oil and bake for about 20 minutes in a 400°F. oven while you make the sauce. In a large, heavy saucepan, cook 1 cup chopped onions and 1 clove garlic, crushed in 3 tablespoons vegetable oil for 8 minutes or until limp. Add 1 can (2 lbs. 3 ozs.) peeled Italian tomatoes with basil, 1 can (6 ozs.) tomato paste, ½ teaspoon basil leaves (or 1 sprig fresh basil), 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon sugar, ½ teaspoon ground black pepper and 1 bay leaf. Heat to boiling, reduce heat and simmer, uncovered, for 15 minutes. In large, shallow, greased casserole, layer cooked eggplant, ½ lb. grated or sliced cheese (use any kind you have on hand), ½ lb. sliced mushrooms, 1 lb. sliced zucchini, 1 lb. sliced summer squash and tomato sauce, finishing off with another ½ lb. of sliced cheese and a good sprinkling of grated Parmesan cheese. Bake for about 45 minutes or until vegetables are tender and cheese is melted and browned.

Anita says, "Make up as much as you need, vary the vegetables but keep the eggplant and mushrooms. Also, you can use bottled or canned pizza sauce or marinara sauce for this dish. Serve with a crusty loaf of bread."

Anita has her own vegetable garden and is an inventive cook who prepares many unusual dishes for her family.

"It's not simply being able to produce a dish perfectly from a recipe that makes you a good cook," says Anita. "It's being able to produce something good with odds and ends and the ability to fix something that's gone wrong that are the tests of one's cooking ability."

HOT BACON AND ASPARAGUS SALAD

- 6 slices bacon
- ½ cup chopped natural (unblanched) almonds
- 1 lb. asparagus, fresh, frozen or canned
- 6 tablespoons vinegar
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- ½ teaspoon dry mustard
- ⅛ teaspoon pepper
- 1 qt. torn mixed salad greens

3. Trim asparagus and cut on a sharp diagonal to get pieces about 1½ inches long. Add asparagus to skillet, cover and cook over medium-high heat for about 5 minutes, shaking pan or stirring often to prevent sticking.

4. When asparagus is tender-crisp, add vinegar, sugar, mustard, pepper and crisp bacon to pan; heat 1 or 2 minutes, stirring. Put greens in salad bowl; pour asparagus mixture over and top with sliced eggs. Sprinkle with roasted almonds. Toss at the table and serve promptly.

Quick Strawberry (or Black Raspberry) Jam

Wash, stem and crush about 2 quarts berries. Measure 3¼ level cups crushed berries and ¼ cup lemon juice into 4-quart kettle; stir well. Slowly sift in 1 package MCP® Jam and Jelly Pectin, stirring vigorously. Set aside 30 minutes, stirring occasionally. Add 1 cup Karo® Light Corn Syrup. Mix well. (Karo keeps sugar crystals from forming.)

Measure 4½ level cups sugar into dry bowl, then gradually stir into berry mixture. Warming to 100°F. (lukewarm) will hasten the sugar dissolving. No hotter, please!

When the sugar is dissolved, jam is ready to eat. Ladle into jelly glasses or freezer containers with tight lids. Store in freezer. Jam to be used within 2-3 weeks may be stored in refrigerator. Yield: 7 cups. NOTE: Other fruit may be substituted for the berries. Check the recipe folder inside every package of MCP Pectin for more freezer jam recipes.

BLACKOUT

Have you ever thought about what you would do if your home freezer stopped running? If you follow these rules, you stand a very good chance of preserving your food.

1) Keep the freezer closed. Open it only to take out food or to add dry ice (see 3). Try to determine how long the current will be off, and how long the food will keep. The length of time food will stay frozen depends on:

- The amount of food in the freezer. A full freezer will stay cold many hours longer than a freezer only a quarter full.
- The kind of food. A freezer full of meat will not warm up as fast as a freezer filled with baked food.
- The temperature of the food. The colder the food, the longer it will stay frozen.
- The freezer itself. A well-insulated freezer will keep food frozen much longer than one with little insulation.
- Size of freezer. The larger the freezer, the longer the food will stay frozen.

2) If you have a locker plant in your area, make arrangements to have food taken care of during an emergency. When transporting food to the plant, wrap it in plenty of newspaper and blankets or use insulated boxes. Then run the food to the locker plant.

3) Your next-best alternative is to add dry ice to the freezer. The more you use, the longer food will remain frozen. Find out before an emergency where you can buy dry ice.

4) If all else fails, break out the home-canning equipment and cook the thawed food whatever ways your family may like it. Here, again, be sure you have the containers, lids and other canning equipment on hand and those canning recipes handy.

Sometimes foods are completely or partially thawed before you discover that your freezer is not running. You may safely refreeze foods if they contain ice crystals or if they are cold — about 40°F. — provided they have not been thawing for more than one or two days. But remember, use refrozen foods as soon as possible after the emergency.

Always examine meat or poultry before you decide what to do with it because it may become unsafe to eat if it starts to spoil. Get rid of the food if the color or odor of the thawed food is questionable.

SMOKEHOUSE SATURDAY NIGHT

Company s coming. The fire s going nicely. There s plenty of ice. You take one last look around the room before your friends arrive, snitching a Smokehouse almond from the bowl on the table. Remember what a hit those almonds were the last time? Everytime you turned around, the dish was empty. Fantastic flavor! No wonder they say, "One Nibble is Never Enough." It s true.

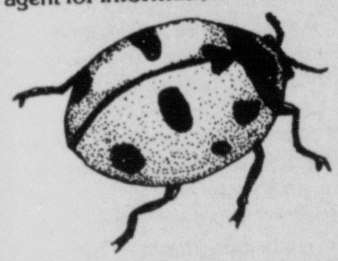
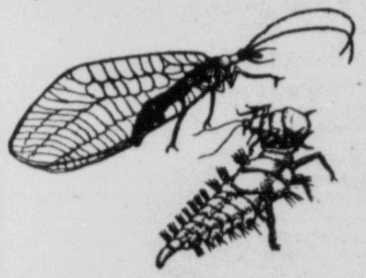
INSECTS THAT MAKE YOUR GARDEN GROW

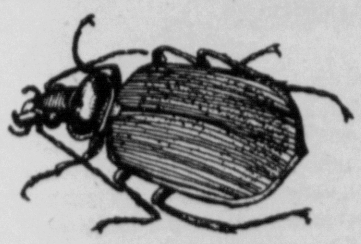
If you would like to raise your garden plants more naturally, you will be happy to know that some insects can be most helpful in destroying unwanted and destructive pests. A few are sold commercially, while others can be encouraged to inhabit your garden. If you have trouble locating nurseries selling these insects, contact your county agricultural agent for information.



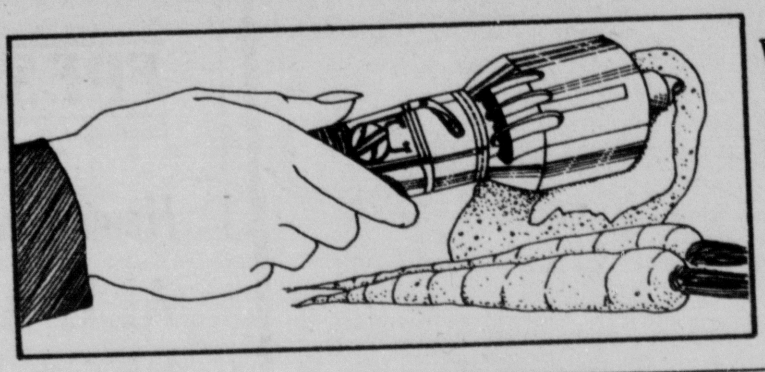
LADYBUGS or lady beetles. They're a great help in reducing pest damage because they feed on and destroy all life stages of destructive aphids, scales, mites and mealybugs. A colony of ladybugs contains about 1,000 bugs and costs about $7. Wait until sundown to release them so that they can settle during the night.



APHIS LIONS. These ravenous young of the lace wing fly already may be in your garden. They destroy many destructive insects, including mites, scales and the eggs of many caterpillars. A colony consists of about 500 lace wing eggs and costs about 75¢.



GROUND BEETLES. Most ground beetles prey upon insect pests found in the soil, and their burrows improve your soil because they allow air and water to penetrate more easily. Since ground beetles usually seek shelter under cover, you can encourage them to live in your garden by keeping a board or piece of wood on an unused spot of ground in the garden.



Yukky. Yummy.

Fruit-Fresh®. You need it for canning, freezing, and fresh fruit.

If you want all the fruit you serve to look and taste its freshest, what you really need is Fruit-Fresh. Because Fruit-Fresh contains a special ingredient that locks in the natural, "just-picked" color and flavor. Which means no more brown, mushy-looking peaches.

Fruit-Fresh is economical, too. A 5-oz. can will preserve up to 75 lbs. of peaches. Here's how: For Canning: simply add Fruit-Fresh to the regular syrup. For Freezing: add Fruit-Fresh to the syrup or dry sugar. For Fresh Fruit: sprinkle Fruit-Fresh on your just-sliced fruit before refrigerating. Sound good? It tastes delicious.

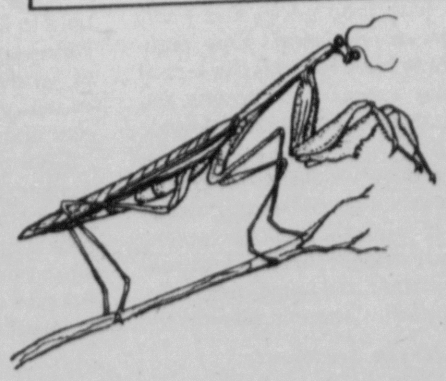
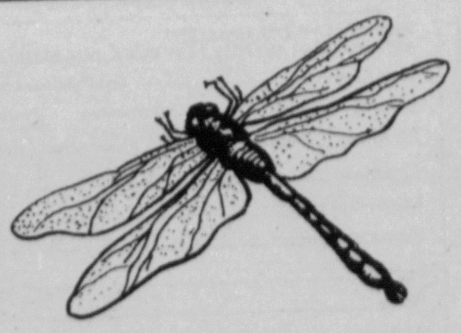
Free Offer: For free Fruit-Fresh dessert recipe booklet, send self-addressed stamped envelope to: Fruit-Fresh Recipe Offer, Dept. FF475, Box 1467, Pittsburgh, Pa. 15230.



PRAYING MANTISES. They are known for their "praying" position when they're about to seize a victim. Mantises kill grasshoppers and flies and, although they also eat beneficial insects, the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture says they do more good than harm. Egg cases contain 200 to 400 mantis eggs and should cost about $1 per case.



DRAGONFLIES. You already know about their brilliant colors and great speed, but do you know that dragonflies also catch mosquitos and other soft-bodied insects? Although they are not available commercially, nearby water encourages their breeding because their young feed only on insects found there.

WHAT'S NEW IN EQUIPMENT

YOU GOTTA TRY IT. The electric vegetable peeler, of course. General Electric has created a Peeling Wand Electric Peeler that makes the peeling of fruits and vegetables a summer breeze. The versatile hand peeler can be used for potatoes, carrots, apples, zucchini, squash, tomatoes, peaches... and so on, ad infinitum. It has a special "Eye Tip" for removing blemishes and potato eyes.

The power unit is sealed in the handle so that the peeler can be used under running water. Additionally available this summer, the electric peeler has a suggested retail price of $22.98.

IT'S LOVERLY TO LOOK AT. That's the shimmery clear, pear-shaped fruit-ripening bowl. A simple design creates a scientifically correct climate for ripening fresh fruit. Measured venting on top and bottom permits circulation of air yet retains important ethylene naturally exuded by fruits during ripening. The lid also reduces moisture loss, thereby preventing shrivel, which so often occurs when fruit is left in an open bowl.

Home Garden Update

ALL-AMERICA VEGETABLE SELECTIONS

In 1932 a small group of concerned people got together to talk about their mutual dissatisfaction with the growth rate, quality and variety of flowers and vegetables in the United States. Their backgrounds were varied: professional gardeners, university teachers, seed producers. They agreed that they wanted a standard method for recognizing outstanding horticultural achievements, and so the voluntary, nonprofit, educational organization, All-America Selections, was born.

We recently spoke with James Wilson, executive secretary of the group, about the work of the members today.

National testing across America is being carried on each year. It involves 31 flower trials and 28 vegetable trials.

Every trial ground has a judge who is an expert with many years' experience. The flower and vegetable councils set their own standards for judging and policing their contests.

This year an All-America gold medal was awarded in the vegetable category for the first time in four years. The winner is a Savoy curly leafed cabbage named Savoy Ace.It was developed in Japan. Wilson told us that it is really "one world as far as horticulture goes, and a plant does not have to be developed in the United States to be an All-America selection. It simply must be able to grow better than all other varieties in all parts of the United States."

This Savoy Ace has a four-pound head, good green coloration well into the head and a creamy white center. "The flavor is also better," Wilson said. "Flavor is stressed in the judging. You can't fool the home gardener on flavor. He might grow a variety once, but not twice if the flavor isn't there."

The Ace also has a 75-day growing time from seed to harvest, which is one week less than the previous Savoy cabbage.

A silver medal was awarded to Spinach Melody, which was developed in Holland. This spinach has a higher resistance to plant disease and to "bolting" (throwing a seed head) than the previously known variety.

Two bronze medals were given this year in the hybrid vegetable class. A cross between zucchini and patty-pan squash was developed, resulting in a deep green color with the round patty-pan shape. The captivating name for the new squash, which was developed in Southern California, is Scallopini.

The second bronze medal went to a hybrid pumpkin called Spirit. It, too, is a product of Southern California. An extremely early producer, the pumpkin will grow as far north as Maine and Michigan. It has five-foot long runners, a 15-inch round head and a symmetrical shape. One might say it was grown to be a Jack O' Lantern.

VEGETABLES IN HOME GARDENS

Roughly half of all United States households will plant gardens in 1977. Although the gardens will vary from a generous, productive 500-square-foot backyard plot yielding 15 types of vegetables to a few tomato plants on an apartment balcony, the fact remains that Americans are growing their own food.

We talked to Chase Cornelius, director of marketing for a leading retail seed producer and merchandiser in the country. "Gardening has become the No. 1 hobby in the United States," said Chase. "It's partly due to high food prices and partly part of the 'green revolution.' One problem many people have found is the lack of open gardening space. Local towns and municipal governments should provide land for planting.

"The most popular vegetables for home-growing this year are green beans, carrots, beets, summer squash (yellow, green, crookneck and straight neck), lettuces, Swiss chard, mustard and turnip greens."

Chase continued, "There is a trend toward smaller and faster growing plants. However, don't let that fool you; cherry tomatoes, although small, grow on large plants. Bush varieties of plants are appearing that don't take limitless space to grow.

"Also," Chase pointed out, "people tend to find varieties that will do well under various growing conditions. There is a core of gardeners who support certain well-known varieties, and that is why they sell year after year."

Chase stressed that "everyone is more familiar than ever with fresh vegetables. There is a halo effect as supermarket produce departments find that home-gardening exposes more people to more vegetables and that there is a consumer demand for vegetable variety."

WHAT TO DO IF YOUR CHILD IS BURNED

By Alvin N. Eden, M.D.

Burns are the country's third-leading cause of accidental death (after the automobile and poisoning), and in 30 percent of the cases children are the victims. Furthermore, burns are the leading cause of accidental death in the home to children between the ages of one and four. Since many parents will have to face this serious problem, they should be familiar with the prevention and treatment of burns.

Treatment is governed by two factors: the severity of the burn and the area (extent) of skin involved. The former refers to the depth of the burn and is classified as follows:

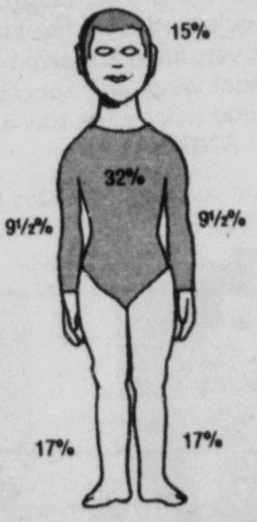
Third Degree. The deepest and most serious burn. There is actual charring, or the burned skin has a leathery, whitish appearance.

If an area of more than 15 percent of the body surface is burned, the victim faces a medical emergency. Indeed, any burn involving even 10 percent of the body can be extremely dangerous and requires prompt medical attention. To estimate the extent of the body that is involved, the illustration below should be useful. The percentages indicated hold true for a five-to-nine-year-old child. They signify that if your child suffers a 2nd-degree or 3rd-degree burn involving, say, an entire leg, he has a 17-percent burn, which is an emergency requiring immediate hospitalization. The calculations for a baby are about the same, except that the head is figured at 18 percent rather than 15 percent. With adults, the "9" rule holds: each arm is 9 percent, each leg 18 percent, the head 9 percent, the front and back of the torso each 18 percent.



Most burns are minor in severity and fall into the first-degree burn category. In such cases, immediately apply cold water to the burn area for a few minutes to relieve the pain. Next, cover the area with a sterile gauze pad. I would suggest you use a non-stick, plastic-covered gauze since ordinary gauze may stick to the skin and be difficult to remove. If the burn area is small and blistered, the treatment still consists of cold water and a sterile gauze pad. You should not disturb the blisters or use ointments. Simply notify your doctor as to the area of skin involved and what the burn looks like, and he will advise you about further treatment. If the burn covers a large area (over 10 percent of the body surface) and, especially, if the skin is blistered or charred, cover it with a clean sheet or a thin plastic wrapping. Wrap your child with blankets to keep him warm and immediately take him to the hospital. Do not apply butter or any salve or ointment.

There are a number of rules that should be followed to reduce the risk of your child suffering a severe burn:

- Keep a baby or a young child away from the stove.
- Don't have dangling electric cords in the house.
- Keep hot pans, especially of grease or oil, on the back of the stove.
- Don't use overhanging tablecloths. They can easily be yanked down by a toddler. I recently treated a severe burn of a little girl who had pulled at a tablecloth and spilled a mug of hot coffee all over her face.
- Don't allow children to play unsupervised in front of an open fire.
- Don't store gasoline in the home.
- Have a fire extinguisher readily available in the house.
- Use flame-retardant fabrics whenever possible.
- Reduce the temperature of bath or shower water.
- Keep matches away from children. One of the leading causes of severe burns is children who set themselves on fire playing with matches in secret.
- Never leave young children unattended in the house.

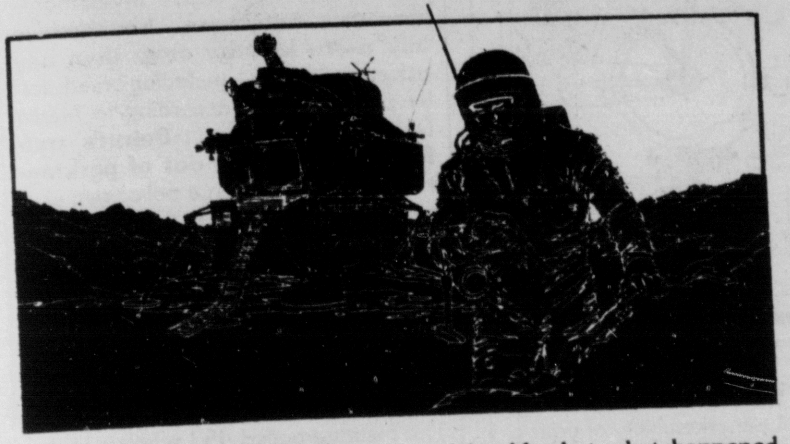
THE MOONWALKERS: WHERE ARE THEY NOW?

Two are still astronauts, but the rest are devoting their lives to such widely differing pursuits as politics, religion, ESP and running beer distributorships.



By Patrick A. Huyghe

On July 20, 1969, the first man from earth walked on the moon. Of the four billion people on earth, 12 have had a chance to participate in what may be man's greatest adventure. These astronauts are alike in many ways, but since that first moonwalk, and the last in 1972, they have gone their separate ways. How has the experience affected them, and what have they done with their lives since walking on the moon?

James Irwin, 47, has been deeply religious all his life, and while on the moon, he said he "felt the presence of God" and a desire to share his renewed faith with others. Born in Pittsburgh, Irwin retired from the space program shortly after his return to earth and formed the High Flight Foundation, an interdenominational Christian organization. On behalf of the Foundation, Irwin has traveled to more than 40 countries, speaking on how "the future is as bright as the promise of God."

Edgar Mitchell, 46, perceived the immense potential of the human being when he set foot on the moon. He is convinced that man is capable of doing whatever he sets his mind to.

On his way to the moon in Apollo 14, he conducted a test in extrasensory perception (ESP) and, upon returning to earth, felt compelled to "continue exploring the nature of consciousness and human potentials." He left NASA in 1972 to write a book and to set up the nonprofit Institute of Noetic Sciences in Palo Alto, Calif.

Edwin "Buzz" Aldrin, 47, born in Montclair, N.J., says it wasn't the walk on the moon that affected his life, but what happened when he set foot on earth again. He described some post-flight experiences and problems encountered by many astronauts in his book, Return to Earth. Aldrin is now president of a consulting firm in Los Angeles.

Eugene Cernan, 43, was the last to step off the moon. Born in Chicago, he has fond memories of the walk but doesn't believe that he has been changed by the experience.

Cernan thinks that we may return to the moon "when we have a purpose to do so, though it may come after we've landed on Mars." After 13 years with NASA, Cernan felt he needed a change. The problems in the field of energy presented a tremendous challenge to him, so in 1976 he joined an oil company in Houston, where he is now executive vice president.

Harrison Schmitt, 42, was on the last Apollo moon flight, and he considers the experience of walking on the moon one of the high points of his life. "But so was getting my Ph.D.," says the only moonwalker who is still single, "and I'm sure that one day I'll have a family, and that too will be a high point."

Schmitt, the only moonwalker without a military background, is a U.S. Senator from New Mexico, but his decision to enter politics had nothing to do with the moonwalk. "I had made that decision many years before."

Neil Armstrong, 46, the first man to walk on the moon, teaches in the Department of Aerospace Engineering and directs the Institute of Engineering and Medicine at the University of Cincinnati. Like many of the other astronauts, Armstrong sees his former colleagues from time to time, but he is no longer willing to discuss his feelings about walking on the moon.

Alan Shepard, 53, the oldest of the 12 moonwalkers, was not only the fifth moonwalker, but also America's first astronaut.

Born in East Derry, N.H., Shepard now lives in Houston, where he has returned to the business interests he has had all along: banking, oil and land investments, breeding quarterhorses, construction and, most recently, a beer distributorship.

Charles Duke, 41, also established a wholesale beer distributorship when he retired from NASA in 1976. Duke now lives in San Antonio, where he heads the distributorship which he named, appropriately enough, the Orbit Corporation.

Alan Bean, 45, thinks that there may be a permanent, manned station in space in the late 1980's and that space will be explored with the shuttle in much the same way as the Western Hemisphere was explored by the boat. One of only two moonwalkers still in the astronaut corps, Bean has recorded more time in space (1,671 hours, 45 minutes) than any other moonwalker.

John Young, 46, is the other moonwalker to stay with NASA as an astronaut. For Young, currently chief of the Astronaut Office in Houston and in charge of the group of astronauts who will fly the space shuttle, the moonwalk did not produce any major changes in his life.

Charles "Pete" Conrad, 47, the third man to walk on the moon, thinks in much the same terms. "It doesn't mean that much to me," says Conrad, who is now a vice president in the international division of an automation company. He feels that Skylab 2, which he commanded, was a greater challenge.

David R. Scott, 47, has remained with NASA but not in the astronaut corps. The seventh man to walk on the moon, Scott says, "There will never be anything as exciting as that." Today he directs NASA's Hugh L. Dryden Flight Center at Edwards Air Force Base in California.

For the most part, walking on the moon did not inspire these men to do things they previously had not thought of doing. Instead, it gave them the courage to pursue earlier ideals and convictions.

There's an exclusive medication which actually helps shrink painful swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues caused by inflammation. And in many cases it gives prompt relief for hours from rectal itching and pain in such tissues.

Tests by doctors on patients showed while it gently relieved such pain, it also helped reduce swelling of these tissues.

The medication used in the tests was Preparation H®. No prescription is needed for Preparation H. In ointment or suppository form.

How To Keep Your Life Spotless

A spot is easiest to remove if treated as soon as it is discovered. Most stains on clothing and other washables can be removed with a prewash soil and stain remover, and most of these products are sprayed directly on the spot. Then the garment is laundered normally. For extra-tough spots, you may have to try two sprays and washings. Washable items should be laundered according to the manufacturer's-care label; and keep in mind that water temperatures are most important when removing stains. Nonwashables, including wallpaper, will usually come clean with an application of a dry (powder) stain remover. Here are some spots that require special remedies:

- Gravies and sauces. Scrape off as much of the grease as possible. Use a spray prewash stain remover to remove the residue. If the sauce has a good deal of milk or cream in it, use lukewarm water with soap to remove any solid portion.
- Wine. Lukewarm water will remove white wine spots; a dry spot-lifter will usually take care of red or rose wine spots.
- Coffee. Traces of sugar must be removed with a damp cloth. Use hot water on the stain repeatedly, then launder. Spot-lifter should remove most of the stain on a nonwashable item.

The Expectant Mother: A Dieting Dilemma

Big mothers have big babies, and big babies often become big adults. That is a new reason obstetricians are concerned about how much weight a pregnant woman gains. Heavy mothers also run a greater risk of obstetrical complications. On the other hand, if a pregnant woman does not gain enough weight, her chances of producing a premature baby are greater. So women often are left in a dilemma: too much weight means higher risk for the mother, too little weight, higher risk for the baby. Dr. Kenneth Travers, a Maryland physician who has reviewed the literature on obesity and pregnancy, finds pregnant American women average a weight gain of 27 pounds. They should not eat for 2, says Travers. They need about 10 extra calories a day in the 1st trimester, 85 extra calories per day in the 2nd trimester and 220 extra calories daily in the 3rd trimester. If women follow Travers's plan, at term, their daily caloric intake should be approximately 2,300 calories.

How To Get Your Invention Off The Drawing Board

If you've got an idea brewing in your head that you think might be the greatest invention since the wheel, how do you let people know about it? Don Studley, a successful amateur inventor, has these suggestions:

1. Draw your idea on paper.
2. Make a prototype of your item. It need not be a functioning unit. It can be made from any available materials (and not necessarily the materials from which the finished product would be made).
3. Try to make a functioning unit.
4. Show the prototype to people — friends, neighbors, relatives — to get an initial reaction.
5. Take the prototype to an appropriate retail store and show it to the manager or buyer and store clerks. They can give valuable feedback on the marketability of your unit.
6. If initial feedback is positive, shop for venture money.
7. Once financing is obtained, make a finished product or a finished-looking working prototype.
8. Find out which trade show is appropriate for your item and rent a small exhibition booth. Attend the show yourself, with family or friends to assist if necessary. You will get immediate reaction from the people who matter — store buyers.
9. Based on the trade's reaction, either start producing your item and taking orders or go back and incorporate the suggestions of buyers to improve upon your idea.

Helping Your Dog Live A Healthier and Happier Life

You can help your dog live longer and be happier by following a few common sense rules, say Dr. Jean Beckwith and Dr. Jerry Hosel, who practice veterinary medicine in Dallas.

- Diet. Dietary needs of a dog change as it grows older, and a vet can best tell you how to feed your dog. He may, for example, prescribe a low protein diet for a dog with kidney or liver problems, a low calorie diet for an overweight dog or a low salt diet for a dog with a heart condition.
- Exercise. Dogs should be taken out on a leash periodically and exercised for a prescribed amount of time. Just turning a dog loose in the yard won't do, since it probably won't run unless it has other dogs with which to run.
- Housing. If a dog stays in the home, it's well sheltered, but if it stays outside, it should have a well-insulated house that's protected from the wind and cold. Dogs — particularly older ones — often need extra heat during cold weather.
- Accidents. The best thing you can do for your dog's safety is not to allow it to run loose.

- Emotional needs. A dog doesn't need numerous people, but it does need someone to keep it from becoming bored and lonesome.
- Health care. Many dogs are living longer today because their owners are calling on vets to do annual physicals, laboratory work and follow-ups.
- Preventive medicine. You can prevent many life-shortening problems by making certain that your dog has the proper vaccinations and gets yearly booster shots.

TIME LIFE BOOKS

The Old West

...brought to roaring life in a richly-bound, lavishly illustrated library that belongs in every American home.

Now, an extraordinary series from TIME-LIFE BOOKS brings to roaring life the adventures and struggles of all those dauntless men and women who opened and settled the West. In The Gunfighters—your introductory volume to THE OLD WEST—you'll experience what it was like to live within the range of the gunsights of the West's most dangerous gunslingers: outlaws like the James gang, who vacationed in Indian Territory between holdups ... the Daltons ... the Youngers ... Butch Cassidy—robbing, terrorizing and killing at will.

You'll feel the nasty thrill of meeting lawman Ben Thompson, one of the West's most ruthless gunmen, admired by Sheriff Bat Masterson as the best gunfighter of them all. You'll be charmed by some less celebrated gunslingers such as Dynamite Sam, Dark Alley Jim, Three-Fingered Dave and Six-Toed Pete ... as well as that notorious Bandit Queen of the Indian Territory, Belle Starr—organizer and fence for rustlers, horse thieves and bootleggers. You'll be there from ominous start to bloody finish at the O.K. Corral's classic shootout ... and watch in amazement the most unsuccessful double bank robbery ever staged: the Dalton Gang's debacle, ending in death and defeat.

After the exciting adventures on every page of The Gunfighters, you'll be looking forward to the rest of the books in the series. In The Cowboys, The Indians, The Soldiers, The Trailblazers, The Railroaders, The Expressmen, The Forty-Niners, The Pioneers, The Townsmen, The Texans, The Great Chiefs and other volumes, the superbly told story of THE OLD WEST continues—alive with paintings, early photographs, maps, newspaper clippings and posters, letters, diaries, journals.
